Proposal Is Center of House Fight on $53. 800,000 Naval Air Post

Washington, Feb. 21. - The House began debate today on the $53,800,-000 naval air base program and critics of administration foreign policy immediately centered their fire on a proposal to establish a naval seaplane outpost on far-away Guam.

Party lines were disregarded. Some Democrats and some Republicans denounced the $5,000,000 project as the nation into war, and other members of both parties supported it.

Chairman Vinson (D.-Ga.) of the House Naval Committee tackled the issue soon after the debate began and warned the House that although the Navy has no intention at this time of fortifying the tiny islandless than 1,500 miles from Tokyoits security someday might prove "indispensible to the success of United States defensive operations."

Declaring that the United States must prepare its defenses so it will be able to stand alone, Vinson said:

"Let no one think that with the world being overrun by the dictator powers-Germany and Italy in Europe, and Japan in the Far East-it is not of the utmost importance that we be forever vigilant in looking to our defenses. . . .

would "jump on us" because of the proposed improvements at Guam. "I don't think Japan will pay any more attention to this project than we would to the landing of another 1,000 Japs in the Phillipines," he

Fish contended that passage of the bill would change the nation's foreign policy from "one of defense to one of offense."

"It would lead directly to war if Japan did the same thing we propose to do," the lanky New Yorker

Representative Colmer (D.-Miss.) told the House he is "afraid" the Guam project is the "entering wedge" for fortification of the island. Points to Defense Needs.

Meanwhile, the Senate Military Committee heard the Army's Chief of Ordinance, Maj. Gen. C. M. Wesson, assert that day and night factory shifts would be required to "initiate protective force" of 400,000 soldiers with sufficient anti-aircraft weapons in less than two years. Chairman Sheppard (D.-Texas) said Wesson told the committee during a closed session that even the $110,000,000 recommended by President Roosevelt to supply the Army's "critical" equipment needs would not provide enough artillery, ammunition and other supplies for the 400,000 men in the Regular Army, National

No other Congressional authorization is needed for the $100,000,000 expenditure, and Sheppard said it probably will be placed in a deficiency bill to supplement the $40,000,000 for the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce Roosevelt included in his regular astimates for the War Department.
