

Clean Up! Rake Up! Is Springtime Cry

It's springtime, and that means that Clean Up! Rake Up! campaigns are in progress. Miss Anne Pauline Smith, district home agent of the State College Extension Service, says that whitewashing pays as big dividends in improving the appearance of a farmstead as any spring cleaning practice.

She recommends the following whitewash for exteriors, such as out-buildings and fences, and says it is waterproof: Slack 62 pounds (one bushel) of quicklime with 12 gallons of hot water. Pour into this a mixture of two pounds of common table salt and one pound of sulphate of zinc, dissolved in two gallons of hot water. Finally add two gallons of skimmed milk and mix thoroughly.

Another formula which is suitable for either exterior or interior use follows: Slake one-half bushel of quick or lump lime with boiling water, keeping it covered during the process. Strain it and add a peck of salt dissolved in warm water, three pounds of ground rice put in boiling water and boiled to a thin paste, one-half pound of powdered Spanish whiting, and a pound of clean glue dissolved in warm water. Mix these well together and let the mixture stand for several days. Keep the whitewash thus prepared in a kettle or portable furnace and when used put it on as hot as possible with painter's whitewash brush.

THE ANSWERS

7. Pan American Airways system, seeking a mail subsidy, says 52 out-bound trips a year would cost $3,130,000.
8. An amendment to an important bill, containing provisions not likely to pass by its own strength but which the President cannot veto without killing the important measure.
9. Opinions vary, but "No" is the preponderant answer.
10. No; they are expected to leave soon.

Looking at Washington

eign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee on neutrality revision were under way last week. Some fifteen definite proposals were before the House and not quite that many before the Senate Committee. No one expects any definite action by both houses before May 1st, when the "cash-and-carry" provisions of the present neutrality act expire. This provision has aroused considerable discussion and is the center of a vigorous contest.

It is quite certain that any effort to revise neutrality legislation to permit discrimination as between aggressor and non-aggressor states at war will precipitate a prolonged fight in the Senate where isolation senators are prepared to wage a bitter campaign against any changes. Moreover, in the present delicate state of international affairs, it is thought that the Administration might not risk a chance of a defeat or the loss of prestige that close division would entail abroad.

Under these circumstances the "cash-and-carry" provision may be allowed to lapse or else be extended by resolution for another year, thus giving Congress additional time in which to enact substitute legislation. Such a course may be accompanied by a resolution, authorizing the President to impose embargoes and perhaps take other retaliatory action against Japan. This would meet the objection that a "cash-and-carry" plan aids Japan and hurts China. Obviously, in Europe, the same policy aids the democracies in their battle against the dictator states.

The wide difference of opinion that exists in regard to proper neutrality legislation is seen in the testimony of Bernard M. Maruch, who was chairman of the War Industries Board during the World War. He advocated a middle-of-the-road neutrality which would achieve equally collective action and sanctions against aggressor nations and complete American isolation from the outside world. This is far from the position of Henry L. Stimson, most recent Republican Secretary of State, who favors vigorous "economic" warfare against aggressor nations on the ground that unless halted, aggression will endanger American interests and security.

The diversity of opinion bridges all party lines. In fact, Representative Martin of Massachusetts, minority floor leader, says no effort will be made to organize Republican policy around there are too many variations of opinion on our side of the

4-H Church Sunday Is Planned May 14

To emphasize spiritual development as an essential to good citizenship and good living, North Carolina 4-H Club members will sponsor 4-H Church Sunday on May 14, it was announced today by L. R. Harrill, club leader for the State College Extension Service. It will be a Sunday set apart all over North Carolina for 4-H Club members to participate in the church services in their respective communities, he explained.

Several methods of observing this occasion have been suggested to club members and they are expected to work out a program of participation with local ministers and other church leaders.

Some clubs will sponsor the preparation of the Church Bulletin which will include an explanation of 4-H Club work, or club members dressed in the distinctive club uniform will distribute it. Many ministers are expected to invite two club members to sit in the pulpit with them, a girl to read the scripture lesson and a boy to lead in prayer.

The collection will be taken in some churches by the boys, and team demonstrations are being planned by club members in other counties. The musical program for the service is being arranged by several clubs.

Other groups will conduct Vesper services, this program being especially recommended for Older Youth Groups. Young People's services will be sponsored by numbers of clubs, while many will lead a Go-To-Church-Day campaign.

Infertile Eggs Will Hold Flavor Better

Infertile eggs will hold their flavor better and will keep fresh longer in hot weather, says C. F. Parrish, poultry specialist of the State College Extension Service, in offering poultry suggestions for the month of April. To obtain this type of eggs, all male birds should be sold when hatching is completed, and plans made to replace them for another year with pedigreed males from a dependable breeder, or least with males from a reliable source, he explained.

Parrish offered these other suggestions for successful flock management in the Spring: Don't sell out the flock of hens, but cull out instead. Keep the birds that are and have been heavy layers as indicated by worn feathers, plump red combs and wattles, bright and wide-awake eyes, bleached beak and shanks, and a full, soft, flexible abdomen free from hard lumps of fat.

Since the days are getting long enough for birds to consume enough mash without stimulating them, as is the case when a wet mash is fed, it will pay to start cutting down on the amount given each day until the practice is stopped entirely. The stimulating practice will have to be resumed in June when hot weather will cut feed consumption, resulting in lower egg production.

However, a high quality laying mash should be fed at this season rather than try to economize with a cheaper mash because eggs are cheaper. It is true that reasonably good egg production can be obtained with cheap feed now, but if the birds are to continue heavy production throughout the spring and summer and remain in good health, they must have a good feed continuously.

Free Cotton Classing Service Offered Again

Organized cotton improvement groups may apply for free classification of their 1939 crops under the Amended Grade and Staple Statistics Act, any time but not later than September 1, J. A. Shanklin, cotton specialist of the State College Extension Service, announces. Shanklin has been cooperating with county farm agents in the organization of one-variety cotton communities throughout the State, and these groups will be entitled to free classification.

Regulations now require that improvement organizations file their requests for the service after their grower-members have completed planting. "This requirement was not in effect for the 1938 season, the first year the service was offered, but will apply for 1939 so that each organized group may give detailed acreage figures upon which the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics can plan its services for the 1939-40 season," Shanklin said.

Organized groups approved in 1938 must apply for renewal of their applications, and this may be done any time after their cotton is planted and between the dates specified for new applications.

Because there is a possibility that funds allotted by the B. A. E. for this work may be inadequate to supply the service to all groups requesting it for the 1939 crop, the extension specialist urged that the one-variety communities make applications as soon as possible, since they will be considered for approval in the order in which they are received, with allowance for planting dates in each section of the cotton belt.

UNCHANGED

Demand conditions under which tobacco growers will market their 1939 crop are expected to hold relatively stable as compared with demand factors during the current season, predicts the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics.
