BENEFITS FOR THE CONSUMERS?

Does anybody want to know the justification for the payment of cash benefits to the farmers of the United States?

If high tariffs and other price-supporting devices for industrial products have (1) adversely affected the foreign market for farm products or (2) increased living and production costs of farmers in this country, then the farmer is entitled to similar "protection" from the government.

There seems to be no doubt but that certain policies of the Federal government, adopted to "protect" industry and labor, have impaired the foreign markets for our export crops. The figures also reveal that the prices of farm products in relation to non-farm prices are about 225 per cent below a normal relationship.

Consequently, in our opinion, there is the most complete justification for compensating "protection" for farmers in the form of cash benefits, often referred to as the "farmers' tariff."

Now, let us proceed another step. If cash benefits to farmers are justified by the fact that Federal policies have aided industry and increased the costs of what the farmers have to buy then the fact emerges that both policies increase the costs of living to all consumers.

The question arises, "What shall the government do for the rest of the people who do not receive benefits, like industry, and agriculture?" Should there be other benefits? Would it be simpler to abolish all benefits?

FARMERS AND THE PRICE RATIO

Farmers should not lose sight of the ratio that exists between the prices they have to pay for the things they buy and the prices they get for the things they sell.

GO TO CHURCH

You, who do not go to church, may ask, "Why should I go to church?"

Two reasons present themselves to my mind:

First, the best people I know never ask this question. But having learned from experience the strength that comes from worship, the inspiration in singing the old hymns of the Faith, the admonition from the sermon and the divine wisdom read publicly from the Word of God, constitute that great army of "Those who know it best seem hungering and thirsting to hear it like the rest."

Second, you are a sinner. And the only institution in this world that has any help for or offers any hope for sinners is the church! Here Christ is preached as the "Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." The only hope for a sinner is Christ and the only institution that preaches Him is the church.

Correct this sentence: "I would have paid him this bill long ago, but for his insulting collection methods."
