URGES UNION NOW
FOR ALL FREE PEOPLES STREET PLAN THE BEST

The people of the United States, undismayed by the realization that the war in which they are engaged may be long and bloody, are confident, in characteristic fashion, that there can be only one end, a victory by the United States and the "united nations" engaged in the struggle with us.

Now involved in a deadly conflict, which the nation desperately sought to avoid, the policies pursued after the last world war, in our abject and frantic quest for peace have proved inadequate. It will be necessary, when the present war is won, to persuade the free peoples of the world to accept an effective organization to guarantee the peace and freedom of all peoples.

In this connection, it is worth noting that the movement to bring about a federal union between the United States and the British Commonwealth is gaining new support. The historic visit of Prime Minister Winston Churchill with his open appeal to the English-speaking peoples to "stick together," has invoked unexpected enthusiasm and, not accidentally, renewed consideration of the methods to be adopted in collaboration.

The most widely discussed plan revolves around the constitutional unification of the English-speaking world in much the same manner that the American colonies formed the United States. This plan is based upon the principles of "Union Now," a book written by Clarence K. Streit about three years ago and advocating that all free nations delegate specified powers in the field of international relations to a common, federated government.

Since the outbreak of the present conflict, in which Germany has overrun some of the free nations, Mr. Streit has published a second book, "Union Now With Britain," urging that the English-speaking peoples get together for the prosecution of the war and the winning of the peace upon a Federal Union basis, rather than on terms of alliance, association or other foreign bases.

Mr. Streit served in the first World War, was a Captain in the Army Intelligence Service at Paris, and later, as a newspaper correspondent, lived in Geneva, Switzerland, for many years, becoming thoroughly familiar with the strength and weakness of the League of Nations.

The essential difference between the Streit plan and the League plan is that under a Union there would be a federated parliament, with limited delegated powers, elected directly by the peoples of the member states, with representation based upon population. Under the League plan, or any system of alliance or association, each nation would constitute a separate unit with equal voice in directing policy but with unequal responsibility thereafter.

As Mr. Streit points out, the United States can secure its proportionate authority in any international organization only if the federated union, like the American Constitution, bases representation upon population.

Shortly after the publication of Mr. Streit's book, the writer had the opportunity to discuss the author's plan with him. Since that day it has seemed to us that "Union Now" represents not only the best but practically the sole opportunity of preserving the peace of the world in the future.

Quite recently a petition has been presented to the White House, urging action now on this proposal and it is significant that the petition bears the names of Owen J. Roberts, Senior Associate Justice of the Supreme Court and Chairman of the Special Pearl Harbor Investigation Board recently appointed by the President. Certainly, Mr. Justice Roberts is too smart to lend his name to any fantastic and impractical dream. The fact that he approves the Union idea should carry tremendous weight with his fellow countrymen.

It is also worth reporting that a survey, made by Fortune Magazine in December, reveals that 7,000,000 American adults now believe that "the United States, after the war, should join a union of democracies in all parts of the world to keep order."

Space does not permit our reporting upon the fundamental plan of the Union, but interested readers may secure additional information by addressing their communications to: Federal Union, Inc., 18 East 45th Street, New York City.

We might add, however, in conclusion, that it would be strange if the people of the United States, for any reason, should decline to advocate their own plan of Federal Union if other democracies nations of the world are ready to accept it as the basis of a world organization, designed to guarantee to the participating peoples the blessings of peace, including political, religious, economic and personal freedom.

U. S. WAR PLANS
"WAR COSTS MONEY"
PLANES, TANKS, GUNS, SHIPS
WARNS JAPS AND NAZIS

The war plans of the United States, as revealed by President Roosevelt in his message to Congress on The State of the Union, involves the production of planes, tanks, guns, and ships at a speed and in a quantity never before attempted by any nation in the history of the world.

That this nation, after striving to maintain peace for more than two decades, now accepts without reserve the challenge of Germany, Italy, and Japan, is the guarantee that no compromise peace is possible and that the fighting can only end in the complete destruction of our foes or in complete disaster for this country and other united nations.

The President recounted, in admirable detail, the policy of criminal conquest adopted by the totalitarian States, and emphasized the fact that "war costs money." This is where every American citizen will participate in the battle for democracy. Undoubtedly, our standard of living must decline if the war lasts very long, as American families pay the taxes and buy the bonds necessary to finance the gigantic production program.

It is important to understand that the President's goal of 60,000 or 125,000 airplanes, or 45,000 or 75,000 tanks, or 20,000 anti-aircraft guns or 35,000, and of 80,000,000 or 10,000,000 deadweight tons of shipping, does not mean the accomplishment of the national purpose. It remains for the American people, working together and united as never before, to make certain that the industrial plant of this country is devoted wholeheartedly to the production of these necessary implements of warfare.

STAMPS
Blue feed stamps added approximately $5,000,000 worth of farm products to the diets of 2,300,000 persons eligible to receive public assistance during November.
Food production is at record high levels, buying power of consumers is the greatest ever, and prices and income are averaging the best in a decade or more.
Farmers and packers of farm products will find it necessary to change their packing and shipping practices because of limited supplies of container material such as burlap or cotton fabric bags.
