BIRD NOTES

Ray Prescott read an article by Charlotte Hilton Green, "Lets Be-Valuable Sparrows." The term birds to the uninitiated. The whitethroated sparrow is one of our most familiar and abundant birds of winter. The song sparrow is a permanent winter visitor all over our State and they breed in both the mountains and in some places along the coast

Of them all, only one is resident throughout the whole State and through the whole year. And that one, the shy sweet singer with the song of "a raindrop's silvery patter," miniature flags. Mrs. J. W. Joyner is the field sparrow. Unfortunately, all too often it is killed indiscriminately as an "old sparrow." It has a style. The dining room table was reddish or coral bill. It also has a more reddish brown back, a longer found principally in grassy fields but frequently the neighborhood of houses and gardens where it feeds on insects and weed seeds. They leave two or three broods and Mrs. Green says we cannot have too much fieldthese shy, sweet singers with the Paschall Barrett read about the friendly little chipping sparrow from the same article. This bird feeds and nests about the dooryard. It is a permanent resident in the Eastern part of the State. Sometimes - its nest is in the rose arbor by the porch or in a shrub or vine or 20 or 30 feet high in a tree. It is the most domestic of all sparrows.

We might learn our native sparros and then they will not pay the price of the ignorance of man and then some gun or sling shot will not end suddenly a small, joyous winged life because it is "just an old sparrow." For goal forever then is the row." For goal forever then is the bit of funny happy little call or the "raindrop's silvery patter." Watermelon was served after the
