The Why, When, What, and How of Point Rationing of Preessed Foods Remains As Same

For the past several weeks there has been conscierable publicity in the papers and on the radio concerning the need for food rationing, and the point system which will be used in the rationing of foods. Until now no definite dates had been set for the registration for Ration Book Two or the time for food rationing to start. We now know that no ra-tioned canned foods will be sold be-tween Feb. 20th and midnight Feb. 28th and that registration will take place Feb. 22 through Feb. 24th. At this time the public is interested in facts as to (1) the need for food rationing; (2) the steps to be taker in registration; (3) the foods to be rationed; (4- the inventory of rationed foods on hand at the time of registration; (5) Ration Book Two; and (6) shopping under point ration-ing, so at this time I will attempt to give you facts which I hope will help you to understand better the food rationing program.

THE NEED FOR RATIONING of canned, bottled, frozen, and dried fruits and vegetables is due to the necessity of properly feeding our ever increasing Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, fighting on foreign fronts and for lend-lease shipments to civilian populations of our Allies in the war zone. We here at home can use considerable quantities of fresh fruits and vegetables which are too bulky and too perishable to be shipped to the fighting forces and on lend-lease. The needs of these have to be taken care of and in order that everyone in this country may get his fair share of what is left for civilian consumption the point sys-tem has been devised. Point Rationing not only divides up the available supply fairly, but it gives everyone, regardless of station in life, freedom of choice among all rationed foods. It conserves food supplies by steer-ing demand away from the scarce items those which are more plenti-
