REYNOLDS GIVES FARM MOVIES TO STATE COLLEGE

A gift of a series of motion pictures on agriculture to the recently organized State College Foundation, Inc., by Richard J. Reynolds of Winston-Salem, has been announced by Col. J. W. Hurrell, dean of administration of the college and president of the Foundation. The moving pictures, to be made in sound and color, will be produced to aid North Carolina farmers in increasing the value and output of their farms, particularly during the war emergency.

When completed, the pictures will be given to the State College Agricultural Extension Service, for use of this and other College Agricultural agencies in their rural educational activities.

Mr. Reynolds, now a Lieutenant in the U. S. Naval Reserve on active sea duty, completed arrangements to make the movies during a recent leave.

"I am doing this," he said, "because I think that nothing is more important to the war effort than the production of food. The farmer has a big job, and needs such aid as I believe these educational movies can give." Mr. Reynolds' interest in agriculture has been stimulated by the operation of his own large farm on which he raises the typical crops of the Piedmont section.

Col. Hurrell expressed appreciation to Mr. Reynolds for the gift. Derrald Maclean of Winston-Salem is making the movies, with the cooperation of the office of F. H. Jeter, agricultural editor of State College, and the technical assistance of Extension specialists and county farm and home agents. Mr. Maclean also photographed "North Carolina, Variety Vacationland," the film Lt. Reynolds produced and gave to the North Carolina Department of Conservation and Development, and "Winston-Salem—A Balanced Community," a picture recently copyrighted and presented to the City of Winston-Salem. Lt. Reynolds received a leave of absence as major to serve in the Navy.

Please place call for the production of five pictures, all to be made on North Carolina farms. Subjects to be treated are: home production, soil, dairying, poultry, and repair and maintenance of farm machinery. Other pictures on subjects of vital interest to North Carolina farm families will be made as rapidly as time permits.

SOLDIERS' KIT BAGS—Red Cross Production Corps members pack Red Cross comfort kits which are given free to all soldiers before they depart for foreign duty. The kits contain cigarettes, a book, playing cards, shaving cream, razors, shoe lace and other items which servicemen find invaluable on their long trips across the seas.

Permits Needed For Hog Killing

Farmers Will Be Given Quotas and Must Keep Records on Slaughtering

Charlotte, March 10.—Newly issued rules regulating private slaughtering of livestock will practically eliminate the meat "black market" in North Carolina, C. Hillman Moody of Raleigh, State supervisor of the Federal Food Distribution administration, said today in a statement issued here by the Office of War Information.

All private slaughtering including farmers are required to register under the rules issued by the Department of Agriculture in cooperation with the Office of Price Administration. Quotas are being set for each slaughter, and all are required to keep records of purchases and sales of edible animals, effective April 1.

Moody warned that the food administration will enforce the new regulations through its graders, meat inspectors, and investigative staff working out of the Atlanta regional office.

All farm war boards will begin issuance of slaughtering permits on March 22.

Manure Represents An Important Dairy Return

Manure represents an important return from the dairy herd, and on account of the present nitrogen situation, it should be most carefully preserved.

John A. Arey, in charge of Dairy Extension at N. C. State College, said that this statement holds true especially for most North Carolina farms, because their soils are badly in need of more organic matter, in addition to the other essential plant foods which are contained in the manure.

He pointed out that the value of manure depends to a large extent on the care which it receives. If it is unduly exposed to the weather during the winter, about one-half of its fertilizing value is lost through heating and leaching. Where sanitary requirements necessitate daily hauling, it should be placed where the fertilizing elements will be utilized by some crop such as small grains or permanent pasture.

Where possible, it is an economical practice to spread manure direct from the barn. Manure spread this month on small grains or pasture, will show much greater returns than if it is spread later.

Manure is not a balanced fertilizer, since it is lacking in phosphorous. Arey suggested the use of 50 pounds of superphosphate with each ton of manure, as it is hauled to the field.
