When the patriotic farmer learned the army was in need of WAACs he poured up his money and turned in all the wax he had.

Keep Hens Cool For High Egg Production

Laying hens must be kept cool and comfortable during hot weather and supplied with plenty of clean fresh water to maintain egg production, says C. F. "Chick" Parrish, Extension poultryman at N. C. State College.

He suggests that the windows and ventilators on the back of the poultry house be opened, and also the ventilators at the ends of the house. Drinking water should be supplied to the flock at least two or three times daily.

When the consumption of mash drops sharply, Parrish advises the feeding of wet mash at noon each day. The dry mash can be moistened with cool, skimmed milk, or cool water at the rate of three pounds of dry mash for each 100 birds.

To keep egg production and profits up, he suggests that the flock be culled closely, sending all marketable birds to the market just as soon as they quit laying. This is not only good economy but it also helps to save feed, which is now critically scarce.

Parrish also urges growers to check frequently for lice and mites on those parasites lower production and profits, and cause a waste of feed.

If there has been any chicken pox or wrenched on the farm or in the neighborhood, the poultry expert advises growers to vaccinate their pullets at about three months of age with fowl pox vaccine. If the pullets are found to be young, give them an individual worm treatment just before they are moved on clean range. Growing chicks, pullets and layers should have a supply of hard grit at all times.

Parrish says that the very best time to vaccinate is in the spring. In the summer, he says, a lot of growers are in a hurry to get their birds to market, and this is not the best time to vaccinate. The summer is a good time to vaccinate, but it is not the best time to vaccinate.

BIRD CLUB

On Saturday morning, Bird Club members listened to articles from the Carolina Calendar, read by Claude Tyson and Howard Pope Murphy, as follows: "The late spring upsurge of life that spilled freshly hatched young birds over all the landscape is now almost over, and there is less chirping and squalling among the bushes. Sets of wrens and cardinals have their second nest of the season, but the mockers and thrashers are taking holiday after bringing off their first broods."

In the June graduation of the young mockers and thrashers there is much comedy. The youngsters cannot get used to the fact that whereas a few days ago they were being fed on the country's best by devoted parents, they are now independent and must hustle for themselves. They sit around on lonesome twigs, with their shoulders humped up and a sour expression on their faces. They doubtless regard themselves as the targets of fate and the victim of rank injustice.

On the other hand the young titmice seem in no way disturbed by the desertion of parents. They are eager for the next adventure and ask no favors.

"A cluster of fighting birds revolving in an angry circle of gray and blue turned out to be composed of three pewees and a jay. The jay, not saying a word, was intent only on getting away, but he got many a peck on the head before he did so, while bits and tufts of feathers floated in the air. Guilt was written all over that jay's behavior."

It could be guessed that he had been found in the act of robbing a nest or swallowing young ones, and had been attacked by the parents. But who was the third pewee? Probably a bystander, or perhaps a victim, who, seeing the robbery, joined in the chase for the good of the cause.

Birds and animals are all individuals and the seeming indifference of each to each is sometimes incredible. Yet there are other times when they join in a common cause and help each other out in a dumbly sympathetic way."

Every day that the 12th Air Force fought in the last phase of the Tunisian campaign, Gen. Doolittle's air fighters needed as much aviation gasoline as would fill two railroad tank trains of 60 cars each.

State College Hints
For Farm HomemakersBy Ruth Current,
N. C. State College.

It is saddening to read the annual accident record for 1941 and find the appalling number of 31,500 deaths due to home accidents. Accidents are real enemies of the home and most of them are caused by thoughtlessness and carelessness. Make your home a safe home by taking care of the danger spots which cause most accidents:

- 1—Have you a step ladder in good repair?
- 2—Are there handrails for all stairways with open sides?
- 3—Do you have a regular place for tools and toys when not in use?
- 4—When using a sharp knife, do you always cut away from you?
- 5—Are poisons and medicines clearly labeled and stored out of reach of children?
- 6—Do members of your family carefully read labels on medicine bottles before using?
- 7—Are all home-canned vegetables and meats boiled for 15 minutes before using?
- 8—Do you empty large receptacles of water immediately after using them?
- 9—Do you immediately wipe up water and grease spilled on the kitchen floor?
- 10—Are the porch steps in good repair?
- 11—Are you learning the habit of turning handles of cooking utensils toward the back of the stove?
- 12—Is some member of your family qualified to give First Aid?

If you fail to answer "yes" to all of these questions, get your family to help you strengthen the weak points so the enemy, "Accident," cannot enter your home.

A woman clerk at war production drive headquarters has developed a method of processing workers' production suggestions which saves 4,992 man-hours per year and 254,000 sheets of paper.

MILK

One ship can transport 6,000 barrels of dried whole milk—about one year's production on 500 farms.

If the 1942 rate of shoe buying in this country had been continued in 1943, sales would have exceeded shoe production by at least 100 million pairs.
