FDR says:
Curtail spending.
Put your savings into war bonds every payday.

One of the strangest facts about man is that he knows practically nothing about his past.

Last Call: Can everything you can get and do what you can to assure food this winter.

The man who doesn't like hot weather can now get ready to dialike cold weather. It's coming.

Since we got into the war more Americans have died on our highways than on the fields of battle.

A study of the dark ages will teach us how to avoid a repetition of that era of ignorance.

Judging from some of the howls on the home-front the men in the service are enjoying the war.

The freedom of young men in the United States is considered a scandal in many parts of the world.

If you expect to have a mansion in the skies you are supposed to furnish the material for building it.

A professor says common sense should be mixed with courtship. But, professor, that would ruin courtship.

A 17-year old boy ought to be more tolerant with his father. When he gets older he will be as dumb as the old man.

Uncle Mose: Ah hears dey gwina change de 'vorce laws. Shucks! Dat don't consarn niggers. Dey don't 'vorce. Dey suits.

State College Hints
For Farm Homemakers

By Ruth Current,
N. C. State College.

Enamelled and granite ware usually can be cleaned very easily by washing with soap and water, but, when food is burned or stuck to the pan, soak the utensil in water before you try to clean it. Avoid sharp scrapers and do not use steel wool or a coarse scouring powder on enamel ware. A mildy alkaline cleaning powder will not harm it and, sometimes, boiling a weak soda solution in a granite ware or enamel ware pan will remove burnt-on food.

A warning about one of the newer finishes, chromium plating, will direct you in taking care of household metals. Never under any circumstances use metal polishes or any kind of cleaning powder on a chromium finish. It is a soft metal and the plating wears off easily. It is easy to keep it clean with just a damp cloth.

And next, a reminder about one of the older metal favorites for kitchen utensils, iron. You can scour iron with steel wool and use a strong alkaline soap to remove grease. One of the most important rules about the use of iron is to always keep it thoroughly dry. Even a little moisture may cause it to rust.

If the iron does become rusty, you can remove the rust with scouring powder or with steel wool. Put a thin coat of sardine oil or fat over any iron utensil, which you use only once in a while. Then, wrap it in paper and store in a dry place.

For galvanized buckets, tubs, and garbage pails, you can safely use coarse scouring powder.

Don't try to keep tin shiny because if you keep shining it, likely you will take off the thin coating of tin. That exposes the basic metal which may rust. Dry tin pans carefully for this reason. If you want to take off some particularly hard-to-remove burnt food, try boiling a little soda and water in the tin pan. But never boil it longer than five minutes at the most.

BIRD CLUB

Lee Parker read an article on Blue Birds and Wrens and Why We Should Supply Them With Bird Houses. The Blue Bird and the Wren are two of our most interesting, friendly, and beneficial birds. They are both beautiful, hardy and musical. The Wren is one of the few birds that sing the year round, even often on a dreary day when snow covers the landscape. The Blue Bird's sweet plaintive note is a harbinger of Spring.

In the past there were orchard trees with hollow limbs and in the forest, dead trees were left standing. These furnished building sites as did the old rail fence and wooden fence posts. Now our orchards are carefully pruned and sprayed; the cavities in our shade trees are concreted and hollow limbs are removed. The hole nesting birds are, therefore, up against a housing problem and so the Wren needs a suitable home in a sheltered place under the eaves, on the porch, or in the garage; while the Blue Bird prefers a home on the body of a shade or fruit tree or on a post or a pole.

Cats are considered as being one of our worst bird enemies and in erecting bird houses be sure and arrange them so these animals cannot get to them.

For all this kindness they gratefully repay us. The amount of destructive insects these birds consume and feed to their voracious young is astounding. They are very beneficial to our plant and vegetable life and need homes and protection.

Order Feed Crop Bulletins Now!

A special group of War Series Bulletins, with the latest information about crops to be grown in a better balanced feed program for North Carolina, are now being published by the Extension Service at State College.

With the feed shortage growing progressively worse and with a prospect of far less feeds being shipped into North Carolina in 1944 than this year, Dr. E. R. Collins, Extension agronomist, suggests that growers plant additional feed crops of all kinds this fall.

He advises that better seed bed preparation, the use of fertilizer at planting, and the planting of crops at the proper time are some of the best ways of increasing yields per acre and making the crops more profitable.

"Alfalfa," bulletin No. 21; "Italian Rye Grass," bulletin No. 22; "Oats, Wheat, Barley, and Rye," bulletin No. 23; "Austrian winter peas, Crimson Clover and Vetch," bulletin No. 24, are now available for free distribution to North Carolina farmers. Growers can request these publications from the Agricultural Editor, State College, Raleigh, or they may obtain them at the office of the County Agent.

Bulletins No. 21 and 22 also carry grazing schedules, showing the approximate grazing period of a large number of crops, which will enable the grower to have enough temporary grazing to last throughout the year. These crops are to be used in addition to a permanent grass-legume pasture, enabling the animals to gather their own food and produce milk and meat on the most profitable basis.

The negro leaders are urging their race to put out its own candidates in the National election. That would add color.

Check Fire Hazards
Throughout The Home

Defective flues and chimneys, defective equipment, and carelessness are some of the main causes of farmstead fires, says David S. Weaver, head of the Department of Agricultural Engineering at N. C. State College.

Roof material which ignites easily, lightning, careless use of smoking materials, improper handling of kerosene and gasoline, unsafe electric wiring, and the wrong use of electric appliances are some of the other causes of fires noted by Weaver.

In the kitchen, for example, the engineer suggests that the farmer ask himself the following questions. Does the stovepipe fit into the chimney flue snugly? Is it necessary for the stovepipe to pass through a partition and, if so, is the partition protected by a metal thimble? How close does the stovepipe come to the wall and ceiling? Could this distance be increased? Is the range set far enough away from the wall? Does it have a metal mat extending at least a foot in front of it to prevent ashes and sparks from falling on the floor?

Is the can of gasoline or kerosene in the safest possible place, if it must be stored in the kitchen. Is the stovepipe supported properly at regular intervals? Do the joints to the pipe fit snugly into each other?

Weaver also suggests that the home owner visit the living room, bedroom, basement, and attic checking on fire hazards and asking himself questions as to what can be done to improve conditions.

"Many simple habits conducive to correcting the fire hazard may be instilled in the members of the family by a general discussion of the fire hazard problem," Weaver says.

Big business has always been able to frighten little business into "co-operation."

WILL THIS HAPPEN AGAIN?

WASHINGTON, D. C.—One of the principal military objectives in the recent bombing of Rome was the railway yard, which is a large railway switch yard where trains are made up and therefore of great importance to the Axis war effort and for the movement of German troops. Italians are acting to prevent additional bombings by declaring the city, general aerial view of which is shown, as open and undefended.

donated by individual citizens of the town, arrangements for which were made by the Literary Club. The refreshments were served in the Farmville Flower Shop which was attractively decorated for the occasion.

Free drinks to the boys in uniform were served by the Drug Stores during their stay in the city, and packages of cigarettes were distributed to them by the American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary, following their dinner, prepared in the Caravan's Field Kitchen, which made camp in the spacious lawn of Miss Tabitha DeVisconti.

On Thursday evening the young girls of the city entertained at a dance at the Country Club, the boys coming over from Wilson where the Caravan spent the night.

The Farmville Boy Scouts in full uniform were on hand all during the day assisting all committees in carrying out their duties.
