Seed TreatmentCuts Grain Loss

Annual losses due to attacks of smut diseases in small grain can be cut to a minimum by the use of seed treatments and the planting of smut resistant varieties, says H. R. Garria, Extension plant pathologist at State College.

Garriss points to the results of tests conducted in 18 North Carolina counties during the 1941-42 season as proof of his statement.

In these experiments, to control the hunt of wheat, often called the stinking smut, seed of the Red Hart variety were artificially inoculated with smut spores. One lot of the seed was treated with ethyl mercury phosphate at the rate of one-half ounce per bushel of seed, while the other portion was not treated.

Seed from the two lots were planted in adjacent rows and the results showed an average of 45.2 infected heads in the untreated rows, and only a trace (two-hundredths of one percent) in the treated rows.

For the control of loose smut of wheat, only the use of disease resistant varieties, such as Leaps 157, will give success. Seed treatment is completely ineffective, Garriss says.

In controlling loose smut of oats, the seed of the Lee variety, susceptible to this disease, were inoculated with the loose smut spores, and then only part of these were treated. The results showed an average of one-tenth of one percent infection in the treated group, and an average of 4.4 percent infection in the untreated group.

In the same test, it was found that the Leaps, Leaps, Victorygrain, Hollers and Pilgrimage 4 showed marked resistance to the disease.

No quadruped of the K9 contin-gent used by the Marines, the Army or the Coast Guard is purchased.
They're strictly volunteers for the duration, loaned by their masters and mistresses. These dogs are taught to hear and smell and see enemies where humans cannot.
They are invaluable at night.

Several K9 training stations are maintained by various branches of our fighting services.

You may not have a dog to send to

Cotton Grading High This Year

Farmers are urged to pick their cotton just as fast as they can get labor enough to do it, says D. F.
Holler, Extension cotton marketing specialist at State College.

He reports that grades on the first 4,000 bales classed by the Raleigh classing office so far this fall have been exceptionally good. Ninety percent of them have been middling or better, with quite a few going at good middling.

The staple is also good, with only a few bales going less than one inch, Holler reports. He estimates that over 95 percent are going better than an inch.

However, because the cotton is not fluffy, a number of bales are not grading well. This, Holler says, is due to poor picking conditions and preparation on the individual farms.

To prevent this occurring he stresses that farmers watch their pickers, particularly the young, inexperienced hands they are forced to use now, and impress upon them the importance of picking it correctly.

The rules that he says should be passed on to pickers are these, keep trash out of the cotton picking sacks, do not pick moist cotton, and do not mix the different grades of cotton in the sacks, piles or wagons.

He urges all farmers in the cotton area to watch these points, and then get their cotton out of the fields as soon as possible to prevent damage by bad weather.

FEATHERS

Feathers from chicken-dressing plants were formerly wasted or used as fertilizer. Now they are being preserved in a weak acid solution and will be used for sleeping bags, pillows, and for camouflage.

More Winter Peas Now Available To Farmers

North Carolina farmers now have a total supply of almost 8,000,000 pounds of Austrian winter peas available for fall use as a winter cover crop following a recent allocation to the State of an additional 5,000-000 pounds, it was announced today by G. T. Scott, chairman of the State AAA Committee.

The additional amount was made available, Scott said, as part of a program designed to increase seeding of winter legumes this fall in order to prevent erosion and increase productivity of the soil.

"This supply should be ample for all our needs," he declared, "but more can be procured if needed. Any serious drain on soil fertility without an attempt to restore it is too dangerous a gamble to take in wartime. By keeping our soil in top condition we will be in a position to produce to the limit as long as military needs require."

The AAA recently announced a supplementary conservation materials program for 1943 under which farmers who already have used their full 1943 production practice allowance can obtain an additional amount of conservation materials, approximately equal to the allowance. Costs of the additional amounts of materials are earned by the farmer, provided they are properly used before the end of this program year, December 31, 1943.

Deadline for applying for supplemental materials is November 15, he declared, and all materials not used within the current program year will be charged against the farm's 1944 production practice allowance. All orders must be placed with the County AAA Committee.

LAWNS

Fall is the best season of the year for seeding lawns, says L. G. McLean, horticulturist with the Experiment Station at State College.

PULPWOOD goes to WAR

Army, navy, allies and essential civilian needs will require 13,000,000 cords of pulpwood in 1943, and equally as much in 1944.
This will go into fiberboard, boxes, and paper containers to ship food, shells, gun parts and supplies of all kinds to our troops on the far-flung battle fields of the world.

R. W. Graeber, Extension forester at State College, says, "No wonder the farmer feels that every piece of pulpwood he gathers is that much more ammunition to fire on our enemies. For without these vitally needed stores of wood the farmers of North Carolina are supplying, our boys on the battle fronts would be without many necessities."

Under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in that certain deed or trust executed by J. Lyman Edwards and wife, et als, dated Feb. ruary 10, 1941, and recorded in Book U-23 page 440 in Pitt County Registry, default having been made in the payment of the indebtedness thereby secured and said deed of trust being by the terms thereof subject to foreclosure, the undersigned Trustee, will offer for sale at public auction to the highest bidder, for cash, at the courthouse door in Greenville, North Carolina, at noon on the 28 day of October, 1943, the lands described in said deed of trust, viz:

1st Tract. Bounded by the lands of R. M. Elks, J. B. Edwards and Chico Creek and Cow Swamp, containing 200 acres, more or less, being the same lands described in conveyance of record in Pitt County Registry in Book M-12 page 403.

2nd Tract. Being in the town of Grimesland and Pitt County, North Carolina, containing 20 feet on Boyd Street and 80 feet on Washington Street, being the same property described in conveyance of record in Pitt County Registry in Book 17 page 247.

This the 22nd day of Sept. 1943.

FOOD

About 1 1/2 billion pounds of food and other agricultural commodities were delivered to shipside during July for export to allied fighting fronts and such shipments will probably increase from month to month.

MILK

In discussing farm production for 1944, J. B. Hutson, associate administrator of the WFA, said in a meeting at Greenville recently: "Our principal concern is over the production of milk and dairy products."

HOW YOU CAN GET

1/3 MORE

FOR YOUR PULPWOODCut Pulpwood for Victory.

There is a great shortage of pulpwood, vitally needed for rayon parachutes, nitrocellulose explosives, surgical dressings, blood plasma containers and hundreds of other war uses. Cut every cord you can. Your country needs it.

Put Your Pulpwood Money into War Bonds. Pulpwood is bringing good prices now, but you can get even more by putting the money you get for it into War Bonds. Every $3 will come back to you as $4 after the war.

And that's when you will need a nice nest egg to buy the things you want—like a home, a car, or a radio.

This is a pulpwood-producing community. Pulpwood is our own war industry; our opportunity to serve our war-time responsibility.

Let's all get busy with our axes—do our patriotic duty today and lay by a reserve of war bonds that will insure continued prosperity for all of us through the post-war years.

TURN YOUR IDLE TREES INTO WAR BONDS

$16.75 worth of pulpwood buys a $3 bond
