NO SPECIAL EDITION

Due to the shortage of labor and the amount of rush commercial jobs in our plant, the editors of the Enterprise have announced that it will be impossible to put out a creditable Tobacco Edition prior to the opening of the markets as in previous years.

An eight page paper will have to suffice and merchants, who have special announcements, are urged to get their ad copy in at once.

Disk Rather Than Plow Pasture Land

In seeding permanent pastures around September 1, the most favorable date, disking is much better than plowing. Pasture experts of the Agricultural Experiment Station at State College say the seed bed for grasses and legumes should be shallow, firm, and well pulverized.

If stubble or the cover crop is chopped up and left on or near the surface, evaporation is reduced and much erosion is prevented. In renovating thin sods the experts suggest that the sod be double cut with a heavy disk to a depth of about four inches.

Shallow seed bed preparation for permanent pastures should be followed with shallow seeding, generally about one-fourth inch deep. One of the best methods is to use a cultipacker seeder. Many growers mix the seed with lime or phosphate and then cross drill the land. A seeding attachment on a grain drill or a hand seeder may be used. The seed should be covered with a cultipacker, harrow, or brush drag.

The whole idea is to get the seed covered but not to plant them too deep.

Inoculation is necessary for white clover unless it has been grown on the land before. "Moisten the seed with a water-syrup mixture, mix with plenty of culture, and then dry with a small amount of cottonseed meal," say the experts. "The inoculated seed should not be exposed to the sun, and it is best to sow them on a cloudy day. When there is any doubt as to whether the inoculation has taken effect, the field can be re-inoculated by broadcasting some of the culture mixed with cottonseed meal or inoculated soil just ahead of a rain."

North Carolina's rural electric co-operatives were allotted more than $4,000,000 in Rural Electrification Administration loan funds in May and June.

A new bulletin on selecting a farm has been prepared by the State College Extension Service and is ready for distribution to North Carolina citizens.

Poultry producers may reduce their feed costs and increase their profits by adequate quantities of supplemental feeds now in preparation for an imminent rise in feed prices.

JAMES NORMAN

James Norman, 67, died Tuesday night at his home near Farmville. Funeral services were conducted from the home Wednesday afternoon at 4 and interment was made in the Hollywood cemetery. Rev. E. C. Chambers, of the Baptist Church officiated at the rites. Mr. Norman was a well known and highly respected farmer and spent his entire life in this community.

Surviving are eight daughters, Mrs. Albert Morgan of Fountain, Mrs. Robert Brady of Tarboro, Mrs. M. L. Beaman of Wailstonburg, Mrs. J. E. Nichols and Mrs. Pannie Norman of Farmville, and Etta, Alma and Betty Norman, all of the home; one sister, Mrs. J. W. Baker, of Washington; two brothers, Ike Norman of Farmville and E. S. Norman of Rocky Mount, and 16 grandchildren.

Now women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

Place Pullets In A Clean Laying House

One of the most important jobs for the poultryman at this period of the year is the cleaning and disinfecting of the laying house, making sure that all mites have been killed.

C. J. Maupin, Extension poultryman at State College, has suggested that all dirt and dust be removed from the floors, walls, and nests. The floors should be scrubbed with a lye water solution, using one ounce of lye to each gallon of water. The usual small can of lye contains 13 ounces of material and this should be mixed with 13 gallons of water. The house should be well ventilated for about two weeks after the treatment so that no pockets of lye water remain.

To kill mites, paint the roosts, dropping boards or pits with carbollinum, crank case oil, gas tar, or other preventive material. In moving the pullets from outdoors into the confinement of the laying-house during hot weather, Maupin suggested that the houses be given maximum ventilation so that the pullets would not suffer from the heat.

He also suggested that the older pullets be separated from the younger pullets because in this way larger egg production is obtained.

If pullets have not been vaccinated against fowl pox, this should be done because the disease may cause a serious reduction in egg yields.

The best pullets are produced on a clean range where they are furnished plenty of cool water and a good grade of growing mash. Maupin pointed out that growing birds need the protein, minerals, and vitamins contained in mash as well as those found in grain. Where grain is fed in hoppers with the growing mash, pullets can balance their own diet.
