STATE COLLEGE ANSWERS TIMELY FARM QUESTIONS

Question: Will I be able to purchase calcium arsenate for boll weevil control?
Answer: You should have obtained a supply several weeks ago to be certain of enough to do a thorough job. All reports indicate that only two-thirds of a normal supply of calcium arsenate is available in North Carolina and not one pound can be wasted since the weevil population is increasing in many sections of the state.

Question: How does sweet potato meal compare with corn as livestock feed?
Answer: The sweet potato meal, a new feed to North Carolina farmers, is fully as good as corn in nutritional value, and the livestock will eat it as readily as they do corn. In addition to these qualities, the meal will keep indefinitely in the crib since weevils and other insects will not bother it. Rats are the only known pests that need be considered in storing the meal. Dehydrators are to be in operation soon at Tabor City, Greenville, Newton and Oriental to take care of surplus production and culls.

Question: What effect will tobacco quotas have on government loans?
Answer: If quotas are approved by farmers in the tobacco referendum on Friday, July 12, farm acreage allotments will be continued on the 1947 crops and government loans will be available. If quotas are not approved, the government is not authorized to provide loans for the 1947 flue-cured tobacco crop.

Good Practices Give Record Crop Of Pigs

A record number of spring pigs were saved this year, reports Jack Kelley, Extension swine specialist of State College, and because of this the pig crop is larger than last year.

An average of 6.5 pigs per litter for the entire state is a great improvement over ten years ago and is encouraging to swine men. The cause for this remarkably good record involves several factors: first, exceptionally good weather during farrowing time; second, wide use of cleaner, tighter houses with sloping floor and guard rail, third, more rigid culling of breeding hogs and the saving of sows with good farrowing records in numbers of pigs raised past weaning age; fourth, general increase in knowledge of how to cope with diseases and the use of practices promoting herd health.

The tendency is to wait for the corn crop by using pasture and roughage instead of pushing the pigs to market on full rations. This fits well with the support price program. Fewer but healthier pigs that grow rapidly is a requirement now that feeds are scarce.

UPSET

One little school girl in an eastern North Carolina town is quite indignant at her government. The Advertising Division of the Department of Conservation and Development is in receipt of the following stern note: "Please send me all the books and papers of the United States or world that you have. My school teacher sent after them and you sent her a lot of stuff from all over the world, and you sent it to her free. So I want you to send it to me, too, because I need it. I think I am as good as she is. So send it soon."

Removing corn suckers, a common practice, is unnecessary, the plant scientists advise. The little shoots do no harm.

E. D. Hayes of Yadkinville produced 122 bushels of corn per acre on the J. D. Wellborn farm last year for the largest yield reported in North Carolina. Yield attested by Farm Agent D. R. Perkins.

State College Hints For Farm Homemakers

By Ruth Current, N. C. State College

Food specialists say there is more waste than overstocking and careless marketing. You can't tell from the looks of a toad how far it can jump and you can't tell the value of all food by its appearance. Many tons of fruit with slight blemishes are ignored by the customer and left to rot, contaminate other fruit, and eventually be thrown away by the retailer. Many of these not so perfect or well-complexioned fruits have equal taste and nutritive value with their more attractive companions.

And another good rule for shoppers that saves food is a hands-off policy when it comes to pinching, prodding, and pomeling sound fruits and vegetables. Handling causes rot and results in waste.

Many people throw away the leaves of cauliflower, endive, and chard without thinking of the tasty nutrition lost by failing to put them in stews and soups. Many a tasty healthful dish goes by the wayside if the cook is unwilling to try new recipes that can turn leftovers or not overly popular vegetables into a delicious dish.

A little foresight in purchasing, careful planning of meals, and conservation in the kitchen, and at the table are just good sense. It not only makes for more adequate, well-balanced diets but in these days it saves the lives of millions of men, women and children who are dying of hunger over the face of this earth of ours.

THE GI STUDENT

The following information on the educational opportunities for GIs has just been released by S. Sgt. Paul G. Manning of the Greenville sub-station.

American GIs all over the world are taking advantage of their leisure time to increase their education. According to Sgt. Manning, they are doing this in many ways. One means of doing this is by taking advantage of classes that are being sponsored by world famous colleges all over the globe. To name a few of these we could list Sarbonne University in France, University of Besancon in France, the University of Luzon and many others.

The Army itself, by means of the United States Armed Forces Institute have also furthered this educational program by making available correspondence and extension courses with many accredited American Educational Institutions. These are completely available to GIs all over the world.

"And so," Sgt. Manning said, "the best men of the United States Army retain their position as the best equipped, best paid—and best educated army in the world."

An invitation to a wedding involves more trouble than a summons to police court.
