Under MacArthur's Management, Japan Making Comeback

The United States' proposal that a seven-nation preliminary peace conference meet in the near future to draft a treaty for Japan is in itself an indication of the success achieved by our occupation policy in the Far East. Many a vexing problem remains to be solved in Japan—but there we have come nearer than anywhere else to achieving what we set out to do in the beginning.

When the battleship Missouri entered Tokyo Bay to become the stage for the formal surrender, no one knew what lay ahead. The major Japanese cities had been ravaged by American air attack. The Japanese home armies were intact, and it was feared that groups of soldiers might carry on underground, guerrilla warfare against the American forces for years to come. It was thought further that a deep hatred might have been bred in the masses of the Japanese people toward America, and that this might make reconstruction and the eventual establishment of an acceptable Japanese government impossible. It was, therefore, in some quarters that full-scale occupation of the Japanese islands might have to be maintained for a generation or more.

The MacArthur policy in Japan would take volumes to describe in detail. Its basic principle has been education—coupled with a very firm kind of justice. The first step was the elimination of the Japanese militarists from positions of influence. The war criminals were sought out, tried, and punished. The enormous authority of the Emperor—which is a religious force difficult to understand in an Occidental country—was used to the utmost. The Japanese people were assured that the American was there to help and that they had nothing to fear if they obeyed the rules. An extremely tight discipline was established over the American military forces, and it was demanded that they make themselves worthy examples of a democratic nation.

MacArthur has been criticized for many things, but no one can doubt his administrative ability, as shown in Japan. To inculcate even the simplest democratic principles in the Japanese mind has been a task of extraordinary difficulty. Japan has always been a feudal country. The bulk of the people have never had anything to say about its government. Until 1853, when the U. S. fleet under Commodore Perry opened the door to trade, it had been almost completely secluded from Western influences. In late years, the militarists swamped the country with their sword-rattling propaganda, and did everything possible to sell the idea that Japan's destiny was domination of the world.

In the face of all this, the American occupation forces have achieved a remarkable degree of success. It will be ridiculous to assume that Japan is now completely prepared for self-government. She will have to be guided in one way or another for a long time to come. But a growing measure of democratic knowledge and feeling is built up, and special stress has been placed on democratic education in the schools. Work is now being done to revitalize Japanese industry and trade, and the campaign against the black market—because of Japan as it is of all the defeated nations—has been intensified.

It is notable that MacArthur has had a free hand in Japan and, in that, he has had a tremendous advantage over the occupation chiefs of Europe. Russian influence has been generally confined to her section of Korea—and there, as usual, she has established an iron curtain. In the main islands Russia has had little to say as to policy, and MacArthur has brooked no obstructionist tactics. There are minor elements among the Japanese people, but they seem to be very much in the minority. Japan, under American rule, has come a long, long way in two years, and this country has every reason for pride in that accomplishment.

In theory, the conferences of governments, whose 1947 meeting was recently held at Salt Lake City, are non-political. The formal agenda is loaded with matters which are of common concern to all the states, and are without partisan coloring.

In practice, however, particularly in years preceding a presidential election, the conferences are used to build fences and to advance candidates. That happened this time.

On the Democratic side, there was an argument among the government Truman will get the nomination on the first ballot, unless the unlikely occurs and he refuses to run.

On the Republican side, the government seemed divided between Earl Warren—with Dewey holding the edge. But the reporters say he did not pick up any new strength, and the Dewey supporters are out to step him.

Warren's chances may largely depend on how well the new labor bill works. If it is passed, and he secured it, several good things are for sale—Primed right.

Separate Cemetery For Colored Studied

A proposal to provide a separate municipally-owned cemetery for colored people was considered at a recent meeting of the Board of Commissioners and is now being studied by a committee consisting of Curtis H. Flanagan, R. O. Long, Jr., and John M. Stansell.

The committee is also investigating the feasibility of transferring supervision of the cemetery from the street department to a new department, established especially for that purpose.

Greenville Recruiting Station Has Openings

The Greenville sub-station of the United States Army Recruiting Service has received notice of 74 openings for former servicemen of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard in units stationed at four different installations in the Third Army Area, according to a statement issued by 1st Lt. George C. Blinbury, commanding officer of the Greenville station.

The openings are as follows: Hq. Third Army, Atlanta, Ga., 7; 4th Corps, Fort Bragg, 36; 189th Medical Battalion, Fort Jackson, S. C., 8; Hq. Detachment, 885th Ordnance Battalion, Fort Bragg, 5; 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, Fort Bragg, 11; Army Services Unit 3448, Fort McPherson, Ga., 7. These openings will be changed from time to time as they are filled and more openings occur.

The assignments will be filled by former members of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, who may apply for direct assignment to these jobs. Once enlisting for one of these openings, the men will be transferred to a post outside of the Third Army Area for at least one year unless their entire unit is moved out of the area. In this case, the men will accompany the unit.

This offer to former servicemen is in conjunction with the Recruiting Service "VJ" or "Veterans Joining" activities, being carried on this month. The openings are in many different military occupational specialties and in all grades. Most of the jobs, however, call for grades from Private First Class to Sergeant.

ARMY ACCEPTS REQUESTS FOR RESERVE COMMISSIONS

The War Department has recently announced that warrant officers, and enlisted personnel of the first three grades who have served honorably for at least six months on active Federal service in the Army of the United States, or one of its components, between Dec. 7, 1943, and June 30, 1947, may apply for a commission in the Officers' Reserve Corps.

Current Army regulations require that applicants be at least 21 years of age and that they must not have passed their 28th birthday at time of appointment in the Officers' Reserve Corps.

Detailed information, necessary application forms, and assistance in the preparation of applications may be obtained by contacting any Army Recruiting Station, Headquarters Military District, or Headquarters Third Army, Military Personnel Procurement Division, AG Section.

Applications for commission in the Officers' Reserve Corps should be mailed to the Commanding General, Third Army, Atlanta 3, Georgia. Attention: Military Personnel Procurement Division, AG Section, prior to Dec. 31, 1947.
