buses. The firm turned them out on 7, Thomas got a contract on 250 schedule—did such a good job that in June the High Point firm got a contract for 225 more buses. Thomas still is on schedule—apparently isn't having any steel problems.

The most ironical thing about the fight over giving school teachers a chunk of the $13,000,000 (surplus or cash balance, take your choice) is that nobody in the legislature thought there would be one when they passed that little section known as 2074 of the appropriations bill.

That's the little piece of fancy writing that says teachers should get a retroactive pay raise last June 30 "if there was a surplus."

In fact, the only speculation was as to how much of a deficit the State would have at the end of the 1949-50 fiscal year.

Now the teachers—particularly the North Carolina Education Association—claims there's a $13,000,000 surplus. Assistant Budget Director Dave Coltrane calls it "cash balance" and says it'll be needed to balance the budget for the current year. In January, 1950, the current fiscal year's estimated income was fixed at $130,000,000. Appropriations for 1950-51 are $142,000,000.

When the Advisory Budget Commission met with the Governor last week, it stuck to the nearly two-year-old estimated income of $129,000,000—despite indication of much more—and agreed unanimously that there was but some $850,000 surplus and that wasn't enough to pay "in multiples of two per cent" as the law directed.

The six-man budget commission is four-two anti-administrative. Senators Edwin Fats of Laurinburg and Grady Rankin of Gastonia, and Representatives Frank Taylor of Goldsboro and Larry Moore of Wilson generally are classed as Scott opponents. Appointees Alonzo Edwards of Hookerton and Harry Caldwell of Greensboro are pro-Scott.

Before the meeting, the Governor said he would stand by the Advisory Budget Commission's decision.
