Taft-MacArthur Alliance Faces Eisenhower Team

by Edward H. Sims Special Correspondent Farmville Enterprise

Washington, March 6—It now appears certain that General Dwight D. Eisenhower is going to have to beat both Senator Robert Taft of Ohio and General Douglas MacArthur if he is going to win the G.O.P. nomination at Chicago this summer. And Ike is currently attempting to do it from Europe, without actively engaging in a delegate-hunting campaign.

General Eisenhower is in this position partly because of his great popularity, which the public opinion polls attest to. His opponents know that he has the popular appeal to storm the convention and sweep in on a wave of enthusiasm and personal appeal. This Taft, and MacArthur, are out to prevent. They will present it singly, or working together as a combination.

At the moment, it appears that the Taft-MacArthur strategy is one of waiting. MacArthur has publicly announced he was not supporting Ike but has not yet said he is supporting Taft. Taft mentions MacArthur in his speeches, gets a big hand, says he thinks the General should make a convention speech, that, if he does, it would be the main one.

It looks as if MacArthur is waiting to see what Taft needs, before shooting all his guns. He may be waiting to see if the convention suddenly turns to him as a darkhorse candidate. Some of MacArthur's friends say this isn't so. But others say a deadlock may develop between Taft and Ike and that then MacArthur would be the logical choice. Whatever the reasons, MacArthur is waiting. And Taft wouldn't comment recently on a question whether he would support MacArthur as a compromise candidate. He smiled and said he didn't expect a deadlock.

If MacArthur is to announce for Taft, the psychological effect would be greater if that announcement came at convention-time than if it came now. Maybe the elder General knows that and is playing a waiting game.

Meanwhile, Eisenhower's forces continue to nibble away at delegates and are getting more and more. Of course, Taft's reserve is not necessarily the source of the gains, since many delegates are as yet undecided. If Ike would come home, about April, he might garner a lot of delegates. He may even do it by returning in May. But whether he will is not known. His backers are pointing to polls and their belief that Ike alone among Republicans can carry parts of the South as major reasons why the G.O.P. should nominate the General.

In this connection, several Southern leaders have said recently that no Republican could carry much of the South. But others have publicly endorsed Eisenhower, including several Governors and Senators. It is true that Taft has not received the official backing in the South Ike has received—yet.

A MacArthur-Taft combination might be more formidable in the South. It looks like that will be the lineup at the Republican convention. Taft-MacArthur versus Eisenhower.
