Wreck Heroine

When news that a train had been derailed at Winslow Junction, N. J., killing nine and injuring 76, reached Margaret Loughman, a Hammonville phone operator, she quickly summoned physicians and fire companies, greatly aiding rescue work.

PARIS SENDS ACROSS TIPS ON FALL FASHIONS

Even so early as midsummer the great gods of Parisian fashion are sending over advance models of autumn's styles to be made up in materials for summer and very early fall wear.

Most of these are tailored frocks. Side drapes are shown on some. High collars on others. One dress is not about to disregard the present vogue of capes and has a loose skirt panel in back that folds up across one's shoulder as a cape. Fine French serge and twill are used.

My, Jack, You Look Sporty!

Would you recognize him? It's General John J. Pershing in ice-cream rousers and dark coat. One has to wear 'em at Atlantic City, you know. With the general is his sister, Miss Mary Pershing.

ORIGIN OF KISSING

ROMANS GOT THE HABIT WHEN SMELLING WOMEN'S BREATHS TO FIND LIQUOR-CULPRITS.

(From the London Mail)

In the early days of Rome wine was offered as a sacrifice. It was improper for the vestal virgins or any of the matrons to appropriate any of the libation.

To ascertain where gullt lay when some of the wine was missing it became the custom for men to smell their kinswomen's breaths. One thing leads to another, and before they knew it the Romans had invented one of the most popular of human institutions—that of kissing.

There has never been a date fixed for the origin of this custom, but it is first mentioned in the memoirs of Pempionius, who presented his lips to be kissed by the deserving nobles, his hands to the less deserving and his feet to the least deserving and least noble.

Even today with all the modern methods of distributing knowledge the practice of kissing is unknown among the darkest Africans. In fact, among the remote, barbaric races the pleas-

WHOM SHALL MOLLY MARRY?

BY ZOE BECKLEY.

DON MANNING, handsome leading man of the Midvale stock company, asked

MOLLY WAYNE to marry him on the night of the dance at the Midvale Boat Club. Within twenty minutes after a breathless consent, Molly found herself tangled in a romantic maze. She knew that BEN WHEELER, resolute and determined manufacturer, loved her, as did BILLY BARTON, a youthful architect. Wheeler flung into a temper on learning the news and vows that he will show Molly something concerning Manning.

As Molly sat where Wheeler had left her, pale and wondering what was behind his threat, Don Manning came up, his face dark with a frown.

"What's that hardware man been saying?" "Nothing that need worry you, Don," Molly's voice was gentle but her expression not reassuring.

ures of kissing are little understood. Erasmus notes that on his visit to England it was used everywhere as a form of greeting. When a visitor entered a house he kissed the father and mother, the sons and daughters, the dog, the cat and anything else that was kissable. This was repeated when departing.

"Right!" sang Billy and hurried out. Molly turned to Don Manning. "I'll be at the station by the news stand—in time—to tell you what I shall do," she whispered, and followed Billy.

She was grateful beyond words to Billy Barton for his understanding silence as they drove toward her home. She must think, think! An orphan and alone, Molly's life was her own to live. Being a normal girl she was spirited and responsive to romantic appeal, and Don's proposal was a challenge to
