Edward Di Fazio, an alleged peddler, claimed he was arrested in mistake for a twin brother. The jury, however, convicted him, but Judge McDevitt deferred sentence pending an investigation.

DOPE QUEEN'S FATHER GETS LIFE SENTENCE

Eight addicts pleaded guilty and six were sentenced to one year each in the House of Correction. One was sentenced to two years and the other to three years in the county prison. Two addicts were found not guilty and a third, after entering a plea of guilty, was put on probation for two years.

DOPE QUEEN'S FATHER GETS LIFE SENTENCE

In passing sentence on Frank Murray, Judge McDevitt said: "You are to be pitied for your daughter, charged with engaging in the sale of dope, must have been a great care and worry to you. If she has any spark of decency left in her she may realize the position she has placed you in, a pitiful position, and come back and assist you. The court is going to be lenient and will sentence you for only one week."

BAILEY'S SPEECH AT WAKE FOREST AN UNUSUAL ONE

Democratic Leader Who Speaks Here Monday Breaks Some New Ground

By R. E. POWELL.

J. W. Bailey made a most unusual kind of Democratic speech to a most unusual kind of campaign audience at Wake Forest Thursday night.

BAILEY'S SPEECH AT WAKE FOREST AN UNUSUAL ONE

It was an appeal to the majority of his audience composed of the young men from the college, to affiliate with the party he espoused. He presupposed their political independence and talked to them about political parties as they are related to world events. He never once asked them to become democrats for ancestral or posterior reasons.

BAILEY'S SPEECH AT WAKE FOREST AN UNUSUAL ONE

Whatever he may have lost in interest by waiting for the Wake candidates to pass in review before the audience as they were introduced by John G. Mills, he regained with his first address. That touched the college revival, conducted by Dr. J. R. Sampay, of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

Audience is Electrified

There were two characteristic digressions in his speech, which was a striking interpretation of what he considers the three outstanding world events of the past twelve months. The first was this reference to Dr. Sampay, an urge to the youth of the college to attach themselves to Christ, and the second was his admonition to fight for human progress through governments of political parties.

BAILEY'S SPEECH AT WAKE FOREST AN UNUSUAL ONE

No excitement attended the presentation of the candidates for county office until Mr. Bailey was beginning to speak. Miss Lottie Lewis, candidate for county treasurer came in the hall with Miss Elsie Riddick and Judge Millard Mial. He paused for the two candidates to come to the platform. But his declaration, a moment before, that in missing some great preacher who conducted a meeting at Wake Forest when he was a student he had done a thing to live to regret, caught the high schoolers in front of him in an unprepared manner. To the younger men it smacked of something different from platform advice and they received it as much in awe as their elders did in approval.

Fight and Peace At It

In the course of his discussion, Mr. Bailey declared that he would like to see the young men in the county wealthy. His party regularly does so.

Much to Be Done

His only advertisement, State Affairs was the prescription he gave for remedying them. These conditions must come through a better Democratic party and there is much to be done.

"Fight for what you think is right," he shouted at the collegians. "The party that can't stand it can't stand these 'puppets' who are hurting the party and those that want you to help them are puppets in the form of goodness looking way for the men who stand for evil."
