One of Questions at County Court Yesterday. Other Court Hoppings

How does a cow legally die? Well, in this instance it did not die legally, court decided yesterday in an amusing case brought before it. It seems that one Frank Cox, negro, had a mortgaged cow. The cow's life ended, Cox said, by a broken neck. He sold the carcass for meat.

Other cases in county court included: Rosa Royall and Copie Hgen, negroes, 90 days for shoplifting. Sid Walker, white, driving auto while drunk, $50 and costs. Pet Allen, same, $50 and costs. Marshall Bennett, negro, receiving liquor $25 and costs.

There will always be a tender feeling in my heart towards one of two of my friends who have imagined some characteristic in me at times similar to some of Governor Aycock's. I suppose this must have been on occasions when my love for and admiration for him has caused me to try to imitate him.

In my early practice of law I had the honor as well as misfortune to be pitted against Governor Aycock in the trial of the case of Smith against Alphin. Alphin had invented a fruit preserver, by use of sulphur burners the fumes of which entered into jars containing the fruit which was covered with water to the tops of the jars.

Officers of the organization are: W. K. Bethune, president; A. E. White, vice-president; H. A. Baker, secretary; James E. Prictor, treasurer; and Harry A. Stacy, trustee.

SOME REMINISCENCES OF GOV. G. B. AYCOCK BY INTIMATE FRIEND

Wayne County's Greatest Son Honored Thursday, as Seen by John D. Langston.

So much has been said and written about Governor Aycock, that it is difficult to recall any incident with which the public is not familiar.

There will always be a tender feeling in my heart towards one of two of my friends who have imagined some characteristic in me at times similar to some of Governor Aycock's. I suppose this must have been on occasions when my love for and admiration for him has caused me to try to imitate him.

Leaders Report

Then the chairman, W. H. Edwards called upon the several division heads for a few brief words: A. T. Griffin thanked all his men and told them how much he appreciated their work.

George A. Royall thanked Mr. Johnson and Mr. Graf, the organizers in the campaign, in a speech of appreciation, saying that "We appreciate their patience and perseverance, and hate to see them go." He referred to the fact that he considered yesterday a red letter day for Goldsboro, and that "We have been making history during the last two weeks. The spirit of teamwork between all the many workers, he went on, was splendid, and he hoped that it would continue and grow. A special tribute to W. S. Denmark, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, concluded his remarks, in which he stated that he considered Mr. Denmark the finest secretary of a chamber of commerce to be found in the state.

Permanent Awards

The permanent awards for the entire campaign were presented to the workers and paid his tribute to the "knockers" who opposed the plan, and brought out the best there was in those in favor of it. "With the erection of the hotel," he said, "we move from the position of a crossroads town to that of a city."

It's all over but the shouting! The hotel is assured; Goldsboro stands ready to go forward to a new and bigger day!

That is the spirit radiating through the city this morning as everyone pats himself and his neighbors on the back, shouting "By Golly we did it!" And by golly we did! No one in the city but is positive that when the letters of Goldsboro put their backs to the wheel they arrive. There is no mistaking that after the convincing demonstration of the past two weeks.

The climax of what was not unjustly called "The Biggest Thing in the History of Goldsboro" came last night at a rousing meeting over the Chamber of Commerce offices when the final reports were turned in, the final sales announced, and the total given as just four hundred thousand dollars! What a cheer went up as the announcement was made that the drive had succeeded! As indeed everyone knew it would.

Speeches Thrill

When the last figures had been chalked up on the big blackboard, and everyone could sit back and bask in the glow of that $400,000, the speeches began. First, C. L. Johnson, manager of the campaign. And the Women's Club for their careful consideration of the "inner man." And the officers of the Chamber of Commerce, for their cooperation. And the office staff, with especial reference to the young ladies who have worked so hard for the move. And H. Well and Brothers for their permission to use the dining room during the week. And the Boy Scouts for giving up the room during that time, and for their other help. And the Kiwanis Club and the Rotary for their aid. "And I'm sorry to leave Goldsboro," he concluded.
