means nothing to Buck Cole, star guard of the Methodist Orphanage fcotball team of Raleigh. Cole has played on the team for the past two years, and is considered a tower of

When he was seven years of age Cole had the misfortune of having his fleeter than a good many youthful athletes with two good legs.

Young Cole's gameness should be an inspiration to the youth of today, many of whom are fonder of petting parties than football.

Elected Captain

As strange as it sounds. Buck Cole does not use an artificial limb in playing football. He covers worlds of ground in a game, getting over the field with a kind of spring, in- and to add two more Virginia civies stead of running.

Cole is 17 years old, and weighs 150 pounds. He will be captain of the Orphanage team next

PIEDMONT UNSETTLED

THINGS ARE IN a chaotic state of affairs over in the Piedmont league. Danville dropped out, and Salisbury-Spencer immediately grabbed off the floating franchise. Now it seems that Danville may attempt to get in the Virginia league. Lee Gooch, former Durham pilot, was in Danville, recently, sounding out sentiment among baseball fans as to that city participating in the Old Dominion loop in the event it is converted into en eight-clubber.

Winston-Salem fans are making an ecort to revive the baseball spirit that waned and died in the Twin City, and Greensboro moguls, have given up the ghost. High Point is said to be wavering, and Salisbury Spencer may not be able to keep the franchise after all.

Felix Hayman and Bud Moore. owners of the Charlotte Sally league club, who purchased the Danville franchise from Sir Herb Murphy, agreed to place the franchise in Salisbury-Spencer, if the sportsmen of those cities could secure a site for a ball park between Salisbury and Spencer. Now it seems a question as to whether a site can be located between the two burgs.

There are some resourceful baseball men in the west. Time and again in the Piedmont seemed about to collapse, only to be saved at the eleventh hour Chances are better than even that some kind of a league will operate in Piedmont territory when the balmy spring days roll
