STEWARTS WILL BE BURIED NEAR BODY OF GEORGE

Convict Brother To Attend Funeral To Be Held Today

Family Is Penniless Part Of Expense Of Shipping Bodies Was Borne By Popular Subscription

WILMINGTON, April 18. (AP)—The bodies of Charles W. Stewart and his son Elmer, who were electrocuted Friday morning for the confessed murder of Detective Sergeant Leon George and Deputy United States Marshal Sam Lillie, lie tonight in the State Squire's in this city, home of the former's daughter, Mrs. The double funeral service will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock and the burials will follow in Bellevue cemetery, near the spot where Leon George, one of their victims, was held to rest after the tragedy in this city last July.

Mrs. Charles W. Stewart, wife and mother respectively of the executed elopers, resided in Wilmington this morning in a state of collapse, and is now under the constant care of a physician.

Pathelet Note Charles W. Stewart, Jr., another son who is serving an eighteen month sentence in the county stocks, following his conviction on four misdemeanor charges, will be allowed to attend the funeral of his father and brother under guard.

A pathelet note came in the last issue of the Stewart drama last night when friends raised by public subscription funds to bring the two bodies here from Raleigh. The family's savings, together with their automobile, have gone to pay the expenses of carrying the case to the higher court and the family is now destitute.

Court Rules Chafin Must Go To Prison

Richmond, Va., April 18.—Don Chafin, former sheriff and reputed political "boss" of Logan county, W. Va., must serve his two-year sentence in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta and pay a fine of $10,000 for conspiring with Tennis Hatfield, keeper of the "Blue Goose" saloon at Barnabus, to violate the national prohibition act by making and carrying into effect an agreement to open and maintain a place for the sale of intoxicating liquors.

Mayor Bain Wins Fight Against Slot Machines

Representative Promising To Get Them Out Of The City By First Of May

These merchants and druggists of Goldsboro who operate slot machines are not secure tonight without the haunting fear of being haled before the city court Monday morning, on a charge of operating a gambling device. Mayor Bain has extended their grace five days.

The city's chief executive called the dogs off temporarily last night when a representative of the concern that owns the machines assured him he would haul them out of Goldsboro by the first of May. He wanted to finish up thirty days contracts, and in view of his apparent readiness to comply with this edict, Mr. Bain allowed him until that date to shut up shop.

Complaints Widespread "But if there is a single one of the machines in operation after the first day of May," the Mayor warned, "the proprietor of the shop in which it is found will be summarily haled into court. I know it is contrary to all judicial procedure to convict a man without giving him a fair trial, but I don't very much mind when his case comes up before me."

Machines in the stores just outside the corporate limits are also slated for the trash heap. Mr. Bain, admitting he had no jurisdiction outside of the city, said he was going to appeal to Sheriff Grant to take action against the operators. He believes the high sheriff will be willing to cooperate in his clean-up campaign, especially when he learns the law is on his side; but if Mr. Grant is disinclined to regard the operation of the machines as worthy of his notice, Mr. Bain says he will find a way to drive them out.

The Mayor says complaints against the devices have become widespread. Mothers and fathers, he said, have told him of the lure of the machines for the children, of how little fellows hands are into the machines, in the put every nickel they can get their hands on into the machines, or even twenty checks, good for five cents each in trade. One lad went home with twenty-two packages of chewing gum, each package representing a nickel dropped in a machine in a nearby grocery store. "I thought the boy had robbed a grocery store," the father complained.

Fire at Clear Spring Menaces Entire Town

Hagerstown, April 18.—Clear Spring, a village west of here, was threatened with destruction late last night by a fire which destroyed the residence of Dr. H. C. Foster, there. Fire companies from Hagerstown were rushed to the town and prevented a more disastrous blaze. David Rickers and Arthur Townson were severely burned about the head and arms when they attempted to save two automobiles from a fire which destroyed the former's garage at Smithburg, near here, last night.

CHARLES STORE TO OPEN HERE IN EARLY FALL

New Department Store Will Carry No Article In Stock That Sells For Over $2.98

STORE WILL ADJOIN BANK Modern Establishment Is Being Erected For It On West Walnut Street

Handling no article over $2.98 in price, but carrying a wide range of merchandise, the Goldsboro store of the Charles chain will open for business in the early fall, Charles Coplin, the president of the organization, stated yesterday afternoon.

The formal opening, he said, will take place within a few days after the completion of the building being erected for the company on west Walnut street, adjoining the Wayne National Bank. This will be in the early part of September, it is believed.

Mr. Coplin was here yesterday on business connected with the entrance of his company into the Goldsboro field. With him was A. C. Woodbridge, representing the American Furniture & Fixtures Co. of Richmond, who has the contract for the interior decorations and show windows of the store.

Outlining the policy of the Charles Stores, Inc., Mr. Coplin said the Goldsboro store would carry a mammoth stock, consisting of the articles usually found in a 5 and 10 cent store, notions, ready-to-wear, shoes, millinery, men and boys' goods, dry goods, piece goods, hardware, radio equipment, household furnishings and hosiery. In all there will be twenty-five departments and between twenty-five and fifty clerks will be employed.

Fletcher Garris Gets Warning From Ku Klux

Flery Cross Is Burned In Front Of His Home In LaGrange Section

SORDID STORY REVEALED Although Daisy Best, star witness for the state in the case charging John Hughes with having whiskey for sale held at LaGrange yesterday, admitted on cross-examination that she had planned the whiskey herself, the jury failed to acquit the defendant, the jurors standing four to two for acquittal. As a result a mistrial was recorded and the case was slated to be tried over again Wednesday, April 20.

The case was tried before Magistrate S. D. McCullen, of Moseley Hall Township, with a jury of six to hear the evidence and arrive at a verdict. Many sordid details developed from examination of witnesses that had a bearing in one way or another on the case, but which was entirely unanticipated by those whose staid heads stood out most under the autumn glare of notoriety.

John Hughes was charged by his niece, Daisy Best, with having whiskey concealed on his premises for the purpose of sale. She had reported the affair to her father, Dick Best, who informed the officers and the latter made a search of Hughes' premises and found a quantity of whiskey buried in the rear of the Hughes home.

An Old, Old Story It was the old story of the way-giveness of youth and the debility of the eternal maiden. Daisy Best had lived with her father near LaGrange and stories reached the ears of Dick Best that his daughter was having improper relations with Fletcher Garris. Best followed tracks several times that led up to the window of his daughter's room, but in every instance she was able to throw off her father's suspicions by inventing her mother.

Then just before Christmas Best and his daughter quarrelled and Daisy Best left her parents' home for the time being. She went to the home of her uncle, John Hughes, and asked for shelter with the plea that she had no place to stay. Hughes took her in, gave her a home and treated her as he would one of his own flesh and blood.

STONE MOUNTAIN FACE OF LEE WILL REMAIN

New York, April 18.—Augustus Lokeman, who has been chosen to succeed Gutzon Borglum as sculptor in charge of the carving of the Stone Mountain Confederate memorial near Atlanta, Ga., said today that the large head already carved on the face of the mountain by Mr. Borglum would not be removed.

SEVEN SPRINGS ALMOST DRIED UP, SAYS GRANT

Two Day Search Of That Section Only Nine Officers In Harvest Of Bees

"COPPERS" WORK PRAISED Revenue Agents Applied Cooperation of the Wayne County Officers

"I think the Seven Springs section is dryer now than it has ever been before," declared Sheriff Grant yesterday afternoon in discussing the recent campaign against the honey sucking insects.

"Three of the bees combing the Seven Springs woods and fields there, roughly Friday and Sunday only, in barrels of still have amounted to about 726 gallons," declared the Sheriff. The 15 barrels were filled at nearly the same rate and about this Thomas and two other agents found a 100 gallon still in operation, about 21 weeks ago. The bees have not yet been removed from the area, but the Sheriff says he will have a report on the matter by next week.

John Thomas, who is the section manager of the Seven Springs section, said he had a report on the matter by next week. He said he had a report on the matter by next week. He said he had a report on the matter by next week.
