MR.H.W. JOHNSTON, TROPICAL PLANT WIZARD AND HIS ARABIAN

The only coffee tree in the United States is located in South Carolina, and its owner, H. W. Johnson, is proud of the plant. The tree shown above with Mr. Johnson, is six years old, and was grown from seed imported from Yemen, Arabia, The tree has fruited heavily for the past two years and last season there were picked from the tree one and one-half gallons of coffee berries. The coffee is contained in a cherrylike berry, each of which contains two berries or grains of coffee. The blooms are snow white and cover the tree, giving forth a strong orange blossom scent. There are large areas said to be suitable for coffee culture in this country.
