The jury sent word to Judge Schenck at 10 o'clock this morning that there was no prospect of an early agreement and requested permission to continue their deliberations at the hotel. The judge instructed Sheriff Cochran to remain there until after lunch if no verdict had been reached.

A report gained wide currency to day, that ten jurors stood for acquittal and two for a manslaughter charge The court room was crowded as in terested persons awaited the verdict. As the crowd gathered around the court house, the jury continued its deliberations. "My this is a good rest," the defendant said. "I was tired after that time in court. When do you suppose they will end it?" she asked.
