Kinston Family Has Two Nations

Kinston, July 21.—Two of three sons of Dr. and Mrs. John Hartley, of this city, are American citizens, one by birth and one by naturalization. But the third, Arthur Hartley, reached manhood without becoming a citizen of the United States, and thereby hangs a tale, told now for the first time.

The Rev. Dr. Hartley, eminent Episcopalian clergyman, was British born and reared. He married in Scotland. He came to America with his bride. They remained here several years. A son was born to them. They returned to England and spent several years, during which time three more children were born. Then they came back to the States. Arthur was one of the three born in England, one a daughter.

The other son born overseas took out papers and was naturalized. Arthur reached the age of 21 before his father had become an American citizen. Thus he was reared and lived in the United States, indifferent to his nationality, a citizen of a foreign nation but an American in thought and action.

When the United States entered the war young Hartley enlisted. He was assigned to office duty at a Texas army post. Chafing under the inaction he asked for his discharge. It was refused. Then he produced records which proved him a British citizen, being held in the American forces against his will. He wanted to hurry across, he said. His superiors saw the point. He was discharged. In a few weeks young Hartley was at the front with a Canadian unit.

A Conservative Investment
As an investment, Wrightsville property is conservative. It is limited in quantity and can not be expanded to meet the demand. The completion of the great causeway, terminal of the highway, and the hard-surfacing of highways in every direction, will bring new crowds and added popularity to a place already famous for generations as the favorite summer playground of the South.

Hugh MacRae and Company have backed Wrightsville for 20 years and will stay with it until all conditions are fulfilled. The municipality of Wrightsville Beach has provided sidewalks and water service. Public Utility Commission has gas, electric light, telephone and trolley service. There are no able and proper building restrictions.
