CARE TURKEYS IS DISCUSSED

Poultry Agent Brown Lists Best Diet For Summer Months

(By T. T. BROWN, Poultry Agent) There is much concern during the spring and summer among the poultrymen who raise a few turkeys, as to what and how to feed them for best results.

The opinion of the man mentioned above is that it is not so much what you feed as how you feed, since it is very easy to kill or weaken your turkeys by over-feeding.

Allow the turkeys to remain quietly in the nest for the first twenty-four hours, having first cleaned out the shells remaining in the nest. Do not feed anything for the first four or eight hours.

Give the feed to the turkeys five times a day for the first ten days. Give the feed on a clean board but do not feed on the ground as intestinal

The Large Hat Dominates the Summer Mode

Smart Summer Frocks Are Shaded by Hats With Broad, Flattering Brims. The Semi-Large Hat Is Also Seen, While the Small Hat Appears When Necessary

JUST as surely as summer breezes blow, the large hat appears to complete a charming picture when worn with the flattering chiffons and sheer afternoon frocks.

The large hat is really a necessity. Their shade is so desirable and their crowns of light weight straws are cool and not too close fitting really warm days—and they are absolutely flattering when drooping of brim.

There are several interesting features of the new large hats. They are trimmed differently and are often interestingly shaped both in crown and brim.

Often the lines on these large hats are broken. The fronts are apt to be cut just as the backs are treated. Odd notches also appear and bows across the front are not uncommon.

son ribbon is most often used, but the exquisite shades selected and softness of the silk does much to soften the outlines of the bow.

All sorts of straws are used for these large hats from the heavier Milans to the yedda and crocheted straws and the hemp, lace, Panama and toshorn.

The semi-large hats are much used, also. They appear in lines that are suitable for sports and town appearances. They lend shade, but also possess to preserve an air of informality that the very large hat lacks.

Small shapes are by no means neglected. They possess an important use in sports as well as for some afternoon appearances. They are indispensable for traveling and should also be seen in the work and wardrobe.

The draped hat makes its appearance along formal lines. It is exceptionally chic in black satin and appears to advantage with flowered chiffons as well as the black frock that will be so much worn even during the summer weather.

Colleen Moore, seen in her newest First National picture, "Naughty But Nice," wears several new and becoming hats.

parasites and disease germs may be picked up in this way. After the first ten days feed only three times a day, giving as much in these three feeds as given in the five.

The turkeys are four weeks old feed only twice a day, night and morning, and increase the amount of bread as the turkeys grow, but be careful not to overfeed. The turkeys should be allowed free access to some green feed or be given chopped cabbage in small amounts.

This poultryman could not get results by feeding boiled eggs, onions, dandelion leaves, cat meat or cottage cheese, but instead met with heavy losses on such feeds.

MAYTAG BODY HONORS CITY

Next Convention to be Held And Local Man Made Officer Association

Goldsboro came in for a full share of honors at the first State convention of Maytag dealers at their two-day convention at Wrightsville Beach.

The following from the Eastern Maytag office here attend the convention: Mr. and Mrs. Royal H. Spence, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Spence, and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Bird.

Those in attendance at the convention were representatives of the various Maytag agencies throughout the state. The session was the first of its kind ever to be held by a Maytag group, and although the first session has just been completed the gathering is a success in every respect.

Elogium of the convention is more power for the Maytag organization and according to the spirit displayed the dealers have a determination to place the business of the organization in North Carolina ahead of that enjoyed in other states.

Dr. Slade Smith, of the Wilmington Maytag Company, and vice-president of the association, was one of the leading lights of the convention.

The banquet was one of the liveliest affairs of its kind ever held on Wrightsville Beach, and certainly in the Oceanic. Maytag songs, sung to popular tunes, added color to the program, which was featured with addresses, discussions, selling points, Maytag minutiae and sundry other happenings of interest.

Today's entire proceedings were business like with the delegates and public alike leaning forward in rapt attention as if realizing perfectly that mighty things depend upon the weighty words which fell from the speakers.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A message of greeting and respect was transmitted to President Coolidge today from the conference for limitation of naval armament at Geneva by Hugh R. Wilson, American minister to Switberland and secretary general of the conference.

"Profoundly and cordially appreciating the wise initiative of the president of the United States in conveying the conference with a view to a further reduction of the burden and danger of the naval armament," the message read. "The delegates desire to tender to him this expression of their highest respect and of their strong hope of a most satisfactory re-
