WEED PRICE OUTLOOK GOOD

From this distance, it begins to look as if Eastern Carolina tobacco growers will this fall receive prices for their weed about equal to prices paid last year. Director Moss of the Oxford Experiment Farm, in an address here, said that he believed prices would again be good. When Director Moss makes an assertion about tobacco, it behoves the rest of us to sit up and take notice, tobacco information than any other man in the field is probably better posted on every detail of the crop. For watching tobacco, in the field, in the warehouse, and in the factory the world over is his business.

Director Moss based his assertion of belief in good prices this year on the fact that stock of leaf qualities on hand similar to those produced in this section does not materially exceed stock on hand at the same time last year. Declaring that the way to tell what tobacco was going to bring was to watch the amounts in storage, he declared—this was on June 8—that only 101,000,000 pounds of tobacco had to be exported or used up by July 1 in order to place the world in the same statistical position as it was at the same time last year. He cited exports for the first quarter to indicate the possibility of the 101,000,000 pounds being used up.

Yesterday information released by the department of agriculture, Washington, was to the effect that leaf tobacco exports from the United States during the first four months of this year showed an eight per cent gain over the corresponding period of 1926, despite the decline in exports to China resulting from disturbances in that country.

Total leaf tobacco exports amounted to 191,884,489 pounds with a value of $48,476,826 during the period from January to April. During the same period last year, 176,838,448 pounds were exported, and while the poundage was less than this year, the price-brought was $50,125,641.

Every type exported reflected a substantial gain, except Maryland and Ohio Export which amounted to little more than 5,000,000 pounds last five per cent. Exports of dark tobaccos were especially encouraging considering the heavy losses some of these types endured in 1926. There was a gain of 1 per cent on flue-cured tobacco, 518 per cent on Burley; 17 per cent on dark-fired Kentucky and Tennessee; 13 per cent on dark Virginia; 19 per cent on Green River and on-sucker; and 43 per cent on cigar leaf.

NEWSPAPERS REACH BILLION DOLLAR CLASS

The newspapers of the United States, for the first time in their history, are doing a billion dollar business this year, W. P. Beazell, assistant managing editor of the New York World, told members of the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' association at their annual banquet, held at Buena Vista.

Income from sales, he said, will be $260,000,000 and from advertising $750,000,000 despite the setback reported from most sections of the country during the spring. The increase over 1926 will be about $20,000,000.

Daily newspaper circulation is growing at an unprecedented rate, Mr. Beazell said. Last year the numerical increase was 50 per cent greater than the growth in population. A newspaper is read every day for every two persons more than ten years of age who are able to read. Every morning a newspaper is printed for every other family in the United States; every evening a newspaper is printed for every family. When daily and semi-weekly newspapers and periodicals are directly related to the news are taken into account the whole circulation reaches 225, 000,000—nine publications for each of the 25,000,000 families of the land.

PERFORMING A SERVICE

The Carolina Shippers Association, Inc., is performing a valuable service for Eastern and Central North Carolina through the alert, efficient fashion in which it is protecting the interests of the section relative to freight rates. No section can make the progress it should—no matter how tremendous its natural possibilities and natural resources—if it is helplessly handicapped by unfair transportation rates. New industries will not locate where they cannot get fair freight rates and industries already located cannot grow as rapidly as they should.

One evidence of the work of the Carolina Shippers is its recent victory for a fourth class freight rate for peaches into the Eastern Carolina points. This will save on an average of $45 per car, a saving that will go into the hands of the consumer.

Again the Association is now demanding a just refrigeration car charge as compared with neighbor states. W. L. Thornton, Jr., secretary and traffic manager of the Association, estimates that the State pays on an average of $18 per car above a reasonable price for service from points in the State to New York City. South Carolina, several hundred miles farther away than North Carolina, pays several dollars per car less for the same service that North Carolina does. The Carolina Shippers hope to gain a re-classification which will change this situation in the hearing scheduled to re-commence in Wilmington next week.

The thousands of barrels of potatoes now being shipped out of the state over the Atlantic Coast Line railroad are going at $1.50 per barrel cheaper than they otherwise would if it had not been for the work of the shippers.

The Association is doing a good work for Eastern North Carolina and it should have the undivided support of the shippers and general public of the section.

ON THE WRONG FOOT

Charlotte ministers at a recent session of their association split on a vote as to sanctioning Sunday newspapers. The Free Methodist church in its quadrennial conference at Rochester, N. Y., passed resolutions deprecating the reading of secular newspapers or publications on Sunday.

It seems to us that the Charlotte ministers who voted against Sunday newspapers and the ing on Sunday are off on the wrong foot. If some Free Methodist church which decries secular reading of the preachers would spend more of their time in preparing sermons that have enough meat in them to warrant use by the newspapers, the ministers might reach, through the papers, thousands who never go to the churches.

One thing the automobile won't do that the horse would—take the driver safely home after he is roundly drunk.

SHEARS AND PASTE THE BISHOPS OF BAVARIA

Floating around in the newspapers is something about what the bishops of Bavaria have recently had to say about the deplorable customs of the women in their country who are touched with the virus of modernity. We know little about Bavaria and less about its bishops, but the discovery which they have made is quite interesting. They claim to have discovered that gymnastic contests in which women engage are immoral, and they wail, "Where are the ladies who faint?"

Where, indeed are the ladies who faint? They are probably gone away with the ladies who wore bustles, the ladies who wore spit curls, the ladies who wore chignons, the ladies who wore ten layers of underskirts, the ladies who swept the gutter with their trails, the ladies who aspired to have busts and hips like barrels and waists like lead pencils, the ladies who sat lights in the windows to attract their drunken husbands home and wept and sighed while waiting for the truants, the ladies who thought refinement depended upon a denial of the facts of life, the ladies who thought that the only way to avoid sin was to become the slaves of some gallant lord, were satisfied to pass their life in the dependency of a poor but much abused relative of the family.

WHERE IS THE BLOOD? (Hickory Record)

Are the editorial writers of this state getting old and losing their vigor? To date we have not seen a single editorial pertaining to the lure of the creek bank and the fishing tackle this year. There have been some writings of fishing specifically but so far this spring the boys on the editorial desks have refrained from fishing generally, that being an expressed longing for the cool and moist spot where a pole may be rested across a stump and the line thrown into the middle of the pool. Where is the blood of an earlier day?

I called up a girl the other night and asked her to marry her. She replied, "All right, I will—who is it talking."

When Lindbergh made his flight every American newspaper had a lot to say about it. When Columbus discovered America not a word was said about it in any of them.

INSPIRITUTE AT CAROLINA SOON

Dates are August 16-September 3; Courses in Coaching, Recreation and Social Work

CHAPEL HILL, June 20—The University of North Carolina Extension Division announced today a second annual Summer Institute to be held here August 16 to September 3. The sixth Annual Coaching School will be in connection with the Institute.

The Summer Institute idea was first tried out here a year ago, and it met with such success that along with the announcement for a second one comes the information that it will be even more comprehensive. This summer there will be offered short courses in coaching, physical education, recreation, and social work.

The Coaching school will be under the direction of R. A. Foster, Director of Athletics, with E. H. Hankin serving as Secretary. It will run from August 22 to September 3 and is planned especially for high school directors. Courses will be offered both in the theory and practice of the coaching of football, basketball, baseball, track, tennis, and soccer.

The morning hours will be devoted to lectures and discussions, while the afternoon will be given over to practical and to demonstrations in the coaching of athletic teams. Special lectures will also be given on the physical care of athletes and on the interpretation of the rules governing the various branches of organized athletics. Various entertainment features outside of the regular hours will be provided. Last year the enrollment in the coaching school was 72, from eight states.

Under the direction of Dr. Howard W. Odum, Director of the School of Public Welfare, there will be a Textile Social Workers Institute, from August 16 to August 25. The Southern Textile Social Service Association is cooperating with the Extension Division in conducting short courses for this Institute. Dr. Odum and Lee M. Brooks of the University faculty will conduct courses in modern social problems; Rev. M. T. Workman, of the Chapel Hill School of Religion will offer a series of lectures on "Principles of Christianity." There will be round table discussions daily for the discussion of mutual problems of social workers in industrial communities.

The School of Recreation and Physical Education, another division of the Institute, will be under the direction of Harold D. Meyer, assisting him will be F. D. Chadwick, Regional Director, Boy Scouts of America; Jan. Fox, physical education instructor, University of North Carolina Summer School; Mrs. Mary Louise Hollands, Camp Fire Girls Executive; Schaeffer from the Denison Manufacturing company.
