DECRY ADMINISTRATION'S NICARAGUAN POLICY

Lane Believes Sandino Would Become President If U. S. Withdrew Forces

Senator Dill Favors Bringing Marines Home to Save Further American Lives

SENATE TESTIMONY IS MADE PUBLIC

Lane Thinks Sandino, If Not Stopped by Marines, Would Take Managua Soon

WASHINGTON, March 2.—(AP)—After a brief but sharp flare up in the Senate today on the administration's policy in Nicaragua, Chairman Borah of the Senate foreign relations committee made public the testimony given to that committee on Nicaraguan conditions last month by high naval officials.

The testimony contained little not already published as to political conditions and battles but members of the committee were highly interested in an opinion by General Lane that in the event Sandino were withdrawn General Sandino would march on Managua and take charge of the government.

The Nicaraguan debate in the senate was launched by Senator Dill, of Washington, a democrat who declared he favored immediate withdrawal of Marines to prevent further loss of American lives. He declined to agree with Senator Shortridge of California that the Marines were necessary to protect American lives and property.

This out of the way, the senate passed a bill authorizing the DeSchautes irrigation projects out west and one extending of land gas permits on public lands for two years.

What was good news for some and bad news for others came from the house census committee. There the Fenn bill for reappointment of the membership of the house of representatives was approved. If adopted, it means a loss of congressmen for a number of states but a gain for others.

Will Hays disappointed those who expected to see him in committee hearing action again. He failed to show up at the senate committee considering the Brookhart bill to prevent "block booking" of motion picture films.

Another senate committee continued its work on the Capper proposal to put all stockyards under the federal stockyard regulatory act but no final action was taken.

BIG INCREASE AT POSTOFFICE

February Receipts Were Nineteen Per Cent Greater Than Receipts a Year Ago

Receipts for the Goldsboro postoffice during February were 19.33 per cent greater than receipts for February a year ago, according to report made yesterday by Postmaster E. A. Simkins.

The past a month receipts were $5,294.26 as against $4,422.54 for the same month a year ago, an increase of $871.72.

The increase in February, however, was not as great as the increase in January, which amounted to about 40 per cent. During that month a total of $7,374.14 was received here as against $5,307.20 a year ago.

"The increase in January and partly in February," said Major Simkins "is largely explained by the location of the catalogue distributing business here. However, February—as well as January—would have showed a healthy increase even if the catalogue business had not been given to Goldsboro."

Wayne County Asked To Give $2,500 To Near East Relief

"To overcome this is one of the great tasks of Christendom. For what could be more in keeping with the mission of the Christ than to make the land of His labor one of good will and friendliness? So long those nations have walked in the dark of hate; can they not be brought into the light of love? No one is in a better position to appreciate the significance of training native leadership under Christian auspices than American men and women. The six American colleges in the Near East are rendering this form of international service. These institutions need your sympathetic consideration now if they are to continue their work. The endowment fund which we are endeavoring to raise will cover the annual deficits but will not provide for expansion.

Police and county authorities were notified of the incident and rushed to the scene, but were unable to find any clues on which to work.

Mr. Aycock, parent of the little five and a half year old girl said there were four children sleeping in the room the little girl and her brother, sleeping on one bed and two other children in another bed.

The little girl, Mildred and but for the presence of mind of her little brother, eleven years old sleeping with her the child might have been taken from the room.

The intruder raised the window, and had his arms around the child and was dragging her through the window head foremost when the little brother was awakened and grabbed her by the foot and by her night gown and held her. They began to scream and a thirteen year old girl on another bed in the room was awakened and saw a man's arm around the child. The screams aroused Mr. and Mrs. Aycock and when they ran into the room and turned the light on the person ran and the window came down leaving the child on the bed.

Both children were too frightened to speak for some time.

There is no clue to whom the guilty party or parties were. With the exception of a small bruise the little girl was unharmed. The child had a premonition something would get her, and told her mother two days ago and had clung to her ever since.
