AUTUMN UPON THE HILLS

Autumn again must be upon the hills;
These are the days that I remember best;
The distant knolls and blue smoke in the West;
And evening coming, with an air that chills
The earth and makes its byways small of death;
The red leaves with the yellow murmuring;
A thought of happiness, and how rich a thing
It is to draw awhile this living breath.

Should twilight now be something strange and still,
And sad with deep autumnal color fill
Your hearth with flame, and light your pipe,
Something took dark the seasons in the going.
Cover and steal away from our slow knowing,
But we shall know it when the time is ripe.

RITZY ROSALIE

It would be just her luck, moans Rosalie, to have the bridge club on the cook's afternoon off and then have the cook forget to make the very special salad dressing. Fortunately, the fair hostess-to-be seems to know how 'tis done, for she has donned her new organdy "bridge apron," properly embellished for just such last minute duties. The doorbell seems to be announcing the arrival of early comers. The mere untying of a bow makes her ready to receive her guests. Which brings to mind the new washable ensembles for the housewife. The printed apron needs only to be removed and the busy person is presentable enough to meet the most voluble of book agents, in her dainty frock of the same material.

the social service record of Governor Alfred E. Smith, a subject which has a wide appeal to women.

Celebrates Birthday

Miss Virginia Lamm the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Lamm was a charming hostess at a lovely party Saturday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock the occasion being her 12th birthday. The Lamm home was beautifully decorated throughout with early fall flowers and ferns. Halloween colors back and yellow were effectively carried out in the dining room where a delicious sweet course with mints were served to the guests who numbered about twenty. Miss Lamm was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

Jerome Family Reunion

Members of the family of Rev. and Mrs. C. P. Jerome, enjoyed a reunion on Sunday at the home of their son, Mr. J. T. Jerome, on East Mulberry street extension. All of the children except two were present for a family dinner and spent the day. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Jerome and children, of Winston Salem; Mrs. E. S. Bowers, and children of Jackson; Mr. P. D. Jerome, Windsor; Rev. R. L. Jerome, of this city and Duke University; Mrs. Preston Holt, of Erwin; Mrs. P. G. Parker and children, of Erwin; and Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Jerome, and children of this city.

The family party of twenty-one spent a pleasant day together.

Rev. W. O. Cone to Speak On Multi-Lateral Treaty

The Citizenship department of the Woman's Club, which for program purposes combines with the League of Women Voters, has announced for its first program on Thursday evening, October 18—next week—at the Woman's Club building, a discussion of the Kellogg Multi-Lateral Treaty by Rev. W. O. Cone, rector of St. Stephens Episcopal church. Rev. Mr. Cone will discuss its provisions, its interpretations, and significance. The hour is 7:30.

The Kellogg Treaty, which is to come before the Senate for ratification at the December session of the Congress, should have the thoughtful attention of every American citizen. The discussion by Mr. Cone is open to any men of the community who care to come, and they are cordially invited to be present.

Miss Mary Moore, principal of Virginia street school, is chairman of the department this year, succeeding Miss Gertrude Weil.

Advice to Girls

By Anna Louise.
DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am a girl in my early teens. I have been going with a boy two years my senior.
He used to come down to my house, but he does not any more, he acts as if he is mad at me.
A few weeks ago he moved away.
He has not written me a letter since he moved. Shall I write to him now?
WRITTEN: No, my dear, don't write to him. If he truly cares for you, he'll write to your first. In the meantime, don't sit around and mope over things, but just try to get around and forget all about it.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am a woman thirty-three years old and I am divorced from my first husband. I have just a man who is fifty-six years old and I love him dearly. He loves me too but he thinks he is too old for me. Do you think it would be a happy marriage? I do not care for dancing or parties, all I want is a good man and a home, one whom I love and who loves me. I love this man dearly. H. B.
H. B.: Of course, you should think he is a long time before marrying a man so much older than yourself. You belong to different generations and your tastes are apt to be widely different. However, if you are willing to give up your good times and settle down to a quiet life, then I see no reason why you should not marry this man. That is of course, provided you love him enough. But you see, it might be rather difficult for both of you. You are both more or less settled, and it might be hard for both of you to try to live up to what the other expected. So think a long time before you make a definite decision.

A Haven In Time Of Need

Due to his professional training, your druggist is more than a shop keeper. He is a friend, a person to whom you can confide your troubles.

True, on his shelves and counters, you will find wares that are in many general stores. They are the articles which are essential for every day up keep of the home.

In addition, you will discover many items that are carried only by your druggist. These are for the care and comfort of the sick.

Patient, consoling, sympathetic, your druggist is ever ready to listen to your problems and to call on his storehouse of professional knowledge in helping you. He does not take the place of a doctor, but he is the physician's ambassador to the people. His skill in compounding prescriptions aid the doctor in effecting your convalescence; his knowledge of hygiene, sickroom needs and first aid treatment are at your service.

Let your druggist help—you can trust him as you do your doctor.
