

NO WORD FROM ROME-BOUND PLANE SINCE TAKE OFF

No Uneasiness Felt However, as Fog Was Thick Along 1st Lap

Williams and Yancey Headed "Pathfinder" For Rome at 9:45 A. M. Monday

HOPE TO FLY 4,700 MILES IN 45 HOURS

Rome Already Making Preparations for Welcome to Brave Americans

OLD ORCHARD, Me., July 8.—(AP)—Two American aviators, twice prevented from starting across the Atlantic by the wrecking of their plane as they attempted a take-off, tonight were believed to be over the ocean driving the monoplane "Pathfinder" towards Rome.

Roger Q. Williams, pilot, and Lewis A. Yancey, navigator, Jr. remained on the take-off even though heavy fog covered the beach and gave visibility of less than a quarter of a mile.

The only report of the plane, which took off at 9:45, was from Lt. L. M. Melka of the coast-guard who accompanied the Pathfinder in an amphibian. He lost sight of the Rome-bound plane an hour later, 75 miles off Portland-Lighthouse. She was then going "fine."

Lack of reports of the progress of the silver and green plane did not discover friends nor Mrs. Gertrude Yancey, wife of the navigator. The fog which caused Williams to have a line of lime poured down the beach to make a take-off was generally all along the coast.

The fliers expected to make the 4,700 mile flight in from 45 to 60 hours. The plane took off after a run of about one mile and headed due south gaining altitude of about 100 feet as it left the beach. The ship then made a wide swing and headed east on by course until lost to sight in the haze.

The fliers planned to strike almost due east to the tip of Cape Cable, N. S., there they will head east, south-east, to the "Corner" the junction of steamship lanes about 1,000 miles from Old Orchard.

Their cruise will then follow the 41st latitude, passing 100 miles north of the Azores and reaching the mainland at Cape Ortegal along the northern tip of Spain. They then plan to cross Bayonne, France, and head across the Mediterranean, passing over the island of Corsica.

Three planes accompanied the Rome-bound plane. A coast guard amphibian was on the left, a small commercial plane on the right and a large commercial amphibian close in the rear.

The Pathfinder seemed to be just able to hold the 100 foot altitude as it passed out of sight. That was the ceiling of the machine as computed by Williams before the takeoff.

It was the third time in six weeks that Williams and Yancey had essayed a takeoff.

The other two attempts, both of which were unsuccessful, were made in the Green Flash, a sister ship of the Pathfinder.

900 AT POOL DURING WEEK

Water Program Be Held at Municipal Swimming Pool Friday

In spite of the fact that the local municipal swimming pool was not open last Thursday, July 4, 900 persons were in attendance at the pool during the week. The News learned yesterday. WILL ADDRESS POULTRY MEET

Professor Ginn of Louisiana University, to Discuss Poultry

A meeting of Wayne county farmers, who at any season of the year have surplus milk and eggs for sale, will be held at the Wayne County Memorial Community building next Friday evening from 4 o'clock to 6 o'clock, it was announced yesterday by T. T. Brown, county poultry agent. Professor W. M. Ginn, of the poultry department of Louisiana State University, will be the speaker at the meeting.

Wayne farmers, like many farmers of other counties all over the country, have sometimes found it a problem to sell their surplus farm and dairy products when the amount is too small to justify the trip to town. Again, there is a flooding of the markets for milk, eggs and like products.

This problem has been solved in a county in Louisiana, and in such a way that the solution has proved to be very satisfactory, according to Mr. Brown. Professor Ginn will explain the solution worked out in the Louisiana county, and will also give some interesting facts about the progress being made in poultry raising in that state.
