SIMMONS ORGANIZES FIGHT ON NEW TARIFF BILL

Opposition Is Aimed At Most Important Of Provisions of Measure

"Monstrously Bad" is Term Used by Democrats in Describing Proposals

PRESIDENT ALLOWED TOO MUCH AUTHORITY, CLAIM

Democrats Would Restore All Power Rejecting Power to Congress

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(AP)—A sweeping program of opposition aimed at nearly every important revision in the voluminous Republican tariff bill was formulated today by the Democratic members of the Senate finance committee.

Meeting in the office of Senator Simmons of North Carolina, ranking member of the committee, the Democratic strategy board, unanimously concluded that the bill as revised by the finance committee majority was a "monstrously bad" one that should be defeated or amended materially.

The minority members who had no part in the actual reframing of the bill passed by the house selected as their principal target for the approaching senate floor contest the proposed new industrial rates, many present duties which are unchanged in the present legislation as it now stands, the flexible provision giving the President authority to readjust tariff rates proposed enlargement of tariff commission taxes, and the proposal to place ad valorem values on United States instead of foreign values.

Beginning Monday the Democratic members will meet almost daily to frame amendments relating not only to rates and other features revised by the majority but to other sections of the measure left to stand in the revision process. These meetings will continue until the entire bill is covered.

While it was generally known that the Democrats are opposed to the flexible provisions in the existing law, Senator Simmons said this opposition had strengthened since the new provision was agreed upon making differences in competitive conditions instead of cost of production the principal elements of consideration by the president and tariff commission in determining rates.

He added that the Democrats would strive to repeal the entire flexible provisions and restore all power rejecting power to congress.

STORY OF AUTO DEATH UNTRUE

Mrs. J. B. Turner Arrives Unharmed, as Friends Mourn Her Supposed Death

Fayetteville was calling the residence of Mrs. J. B. Turner who lives just outside the city on the Snow Hill road. Mildred Turner, 15, answered. "Your mother has just been killed in an automobile accident while on her way to Goldsboro," a man's voice told Miss Turner. The telephone connection broke or the man at the other end of the wire hung up the receiver.

Frantic, Miss Turner called other members of the family and neighbors and related what she had been told of over the telephone. The family learned that Mrs. Turner was supposed to be on her way home from Fayetteville. They began calling the hospitals, the office of Sheriff W. D. Grant, The News Office, the city police department, seeking further information about the purported accident.

It was about 8 o'clock when the report of the fatal wreck came in. Some neighbors and relatives gathered at the Turner home, sought to console the family and to devise some means of getting definite information.

LUBRICATING OIL STOLEN

Thieves Get 48 Gallons at Sinclair Station By Slick Trick

It must have been a slick thief who stole those 48 gallons of lubricating oil from the Sinclair Filling station at the corner of John and Ash streets during Thursday night. Paul Bizzell, manager of the station, is thankful, however, that the robber did not break the large pane of plate glass that was so carefully removed in its entirety and laid as carefully aside to enable the thief or thieves to enter the station.

The theft of the oil, which was contained in five and one gallon cans, was discovered by Mr. Bruce Bizzell, brother of the manager, when he went down to open up the station yesterday morning. He noticed at once that the large pane of glass had been removed from the door that enters the station from the oil pit shed. The glass had been set down on the inside of the station.

A careful check-up disclosed that a considerable quantity of oil, and a Sheffer fountain pen, the property of Will Kaleel, had been stolen. The police were at once notified, and an investigation begun. Officers are hopeful of getting some trace of the oil in case those who stole it attempt to dispose of the lubricant.

It was thought that some sharp instrument and probably a jimmy had been used in removing the glass from the door. The break must have taken place between midnight and six o'clock yesterday morning because an employee was still at the station at 12 o'clock Thursday night.

Charge Is Amended to Rape by State

JURY GOT CASE ABOUT 6 O'CLOCK LAST

Yesterday Continued Testimony and Arguments

Having been unable to diet at 9:30 o'clock last night, H. A. Nunn, presiding judge in the present criminal term of Superior court, ordered the jury in the Bass case to be locked up last night, and for court to open at 9:30 o'clock this morning. The jury had been deliberating for more than three hours, having started at six o'clock last night. The case returned to court and asked Judge Nunn's instructions.

In the original case, the jury was charged with the case of George Carter, Dorchie, who made the charge for the prosecution. The jury, announced, the prosecution was in violation on a charge of assault with intent to commit rape.

Mr. Dorchie, after the state's evidence in the case for the defense, the plaintiff, declaring that it was returned loose, and that the truth of our country would be made safe from the criminal element. He asked the jury to consider both the state's and the defense evidence, to weigh them, and to "do your duty as a jury and render a verdict of guilty."

Paul Edmondson, for the defense, followed Dorchie, and presented to the jury the testimony of the defense witnesses, Tom Hill, and the state's witnesses, and Dr. C. W. Taylor, local physician. He also stated that the prosecuting witness, testimony, given on the case Thursday morning, had been corroborated.

James J. Hatch, made the closing speech in the afternoon. He defended, illustrating with the floor plan of the state, in which the assault is alleged to have occurred, and declaring to the jury that it would have been impossible for the events to have transpired as the prosecution had claimed.

Solicitor Clawson Williams made the closing speech, in which he summed up the case for the state, and ended by asking for a verdict of conviction. The judge's charge followed, and the jury returned the verdict about 6 o'clock.

The trial of Bass was begun Thursday morning. The state introduced a number of witnesses, including the girl, plainclothesman Chas Rhodes, George Carter, Mrs. Carter and L. W. Corbett. The defense also presented several witnesses Thursday, and Bass himself was placed on the stand for about thirty minutes yesterday morning.

He was found guilty and sentenced to two years on the road. Gurley attacked J. A. Johnson, local interior decorator, sometime ago, and inflicted several bad knife wounds. He was said to have been intoxicated at the time.
