The item which we copy below from the Statesville Landmark's correspondence has lots more of sense and remor in it than the average stuff that comes from the free coinage people.

"If sliver advocates can find nothing letter to do than to denounce the old while of the Democratic party, they, or the good of the cause, should say and write uching. While I believe in the free coinage of them is nothing.

While I believe in the free coincge of silver, there is an issue of far great-risepertance to North Curdinians then that. Let us above everything be segnin the control of our own "take government. Let us kick over-reated no more gallant lighters as Mat-thew W. Ransom."

He got his pistol and oume back by his wife. She begged him not to go down where the boys ware, saying to him: "Don't go, Mr. Sims; you will get into HELD HIS WIFE IN HIS ARMS AND trouble

He went, however, and asked Barnett if he meast anything by what he said about "squaring." Barnett as-sured him that he did not.

sured bin that he did not. Will Alexander spoke un and said: "If you've gut any work to do you had better, go and do it." Sims tureed round and faced Alexander. Alexan-der went forward to meet isles. Sims pat his hand in his hip pockst to draw his pietol. As he did so Alexander threw a rock at him, but failed to hit him. Sims simed his pistol at Alexan-der and fired. Soning the blood on Alexander's face he thought he had killed bim, and ho ran back where his wife was. He must have told ber, it is thought, in their conversation hefore he went down to where the men were, contained a full account of the horrible wife murder at Huntersville on last Friday. John Sime, the murderer, was seen at the jail and gave an the write down to where the men were, that he meant to kill Barnett, and probably her, for when she saw him rouning towards her she picked up her child and ran. She put the child down, however, and ran across the field to the road.

field to the road. Three young white men were possing in a wagon. She begged them to save her. One of them made two attempts to do so, but Sims raised his revolver and said he would kill the first man who interfered. Two negroes were also shanding by in the field. He ter-rified them with his threats, and they unde no effort to save the terror-stricken, doomed woman.

THE MURDER.

THE MURDER. Sins overtook his wife. He caught her in his arms, and held her head down in his left arm, against his heaom, pushing her bonnet back as he did so. She plead with him to spare her life, not to kill ber, but the demon of jesicuay and anger had possession of bim, and in an instant he placed the corolver to the side of ber head and three hall went through her hands, and the ball went through her hands, breaking the knuckle of the little fluger, and burning the mit she had on. The ball estered above the ear on the left side of the head, passed the ball entered above the ear on the left side of the head, passed through the brain, killing the woman instantly. Sims let his wife fail to the ground. He then shot at her again, as she lay dead before him. He failed in his sim the second time. He failed in his aim the second time. He left the dead woman on the ground with her brains pozing out. He then went buck to where the men were and said he had killed his darling wife. He returned to his wife's inanimate form, and kissed her twice. He then went to Huntersville and gave himself up. A PECULIAR DESPOSITION.

Sim's mother, Dr. Wilder says, is greatly distressed over the loss of her daughter-in-law, to whom she was de-votedly attached. She says her som was always peculiar, and she has al-ways anticipated some trouble like this. He was mever satisfied, but was always unhappy, discontented and sus-picious. Prior to that year there had been an excess in receipts over ex-penditures for every fiscal year since 1865, the lowest excess in all those years up to 1299-8 having been in the year 1874, when the receipts exceeded the expenditures by only two millions, three hundred and forty-four thousand, eight hundred and forty-four thousand, eight hundred and sighty-two dolloars. For the present lises year ended to-day, Secretary Cariale on Dec. 3rd, 1894, estimates that the deticiency would be $90,000,000. An old philospher has said: "Our puscessions should be like our shoes, if too small, they will gall and phob us, but if too large, they will cause us to stumble and trip." But this non-sensical talk of an equal distribution of wealth is one of the most imme ideas that ever entered into the head of a man. If it wave possible to give every homan belog on the globe societly the same smount of mousy and exactly the same valution of real estate, there would not be an equal distribution in the full mense of that term, for men are constituted so diffarently. Their capacities of puscession and enjoyment are an different that requalization is an imposalidity. A tub was large enough for Diogenes and he was con-tented in it, but a world was too little for Alexander.
