

A WIFE'S SOCIAL DUTIES.

SHE BELIEVES WOMAN'S FIRST DUTY IS TO HER HUSBAND.

What Are a Woman's Social Duties?—The Blackboard Class of Non-Throwing Curves Down Below the Social Car of Judgment.

In the description given of the tragic death of a well-known man, who had gone away from his home because he was ill, there occurs this line—which may be true or untrue—"His wife would have been with him, but her social duties prevented her."

SHE UPHOLDS MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Do you suppose that when Ruth came to her mother-in-law, claiming that "They people shall be my people, thy God, my God," it was because she thought it a social duty; or was it a reflection of the love she bore her husband, of the duty she felt she owed him, and which made her help the woman who bore his name and needed her help?

DUTY AND SOCIETY.

But that wasn't the text of my sermon—for I am moved to sermonize a bit to-day. Suppose the social duties of the two Marys had kept them from visiting each other morning—would they have met the angel at the tomb? Suppose his social duties had kept Christ so busy that He could pay no attention to the poor and the blind, and the sick of body and the sick of soul? What would have happened to them?

My friends, did you ever try to think out what your social duties were? Mainly put, they are simply what you owe to the society in which you live. But sometimes I think they go further than that, and the society in which we really live is that in which love reigns and no other society can demand a duty from us.

WARD ALL THE WORLD, AND TOWARD GOD?

For help, beloved, let us love so well. Our work shall still be better for our love. And still our love be stronger for our work. And both commended for the sake of each, by all in us workers and true lovers, born.

LOVE LIKE STEELING GOLD.

And the little stalling says, "The love that makes the world go round." And it means not just to-day, but yesterday, to-day, and forever. It means that finest of loves—the love which forgets self, and which is worth, well, it is worth all that there is in the world, that it means all that there is in the world to come. I do not mean by this the love which finds its best expression in continual careers.

ANOTHER TROUBLE.

And there is another, a woman, bright, piquant, perhaps a bit masculine, but then men laugh, and say that probably she would have softened if she had married; and the man who takes her out to dinner, doesn't dream that her beautiful fan is paid for by a scurrilous story written against the bottom; that her gown was presented to her by a woman to whom she wrote the invitation, because a proper gown is just heard the story of your visit to Mrs. X. It is most interesting. I am sure you would hate to have it get into print. Would you kindly let me have by bearer a couple of hundred dollars? I will pay you when rents come in next month.—Lovingly yours; Margie.

AT YOUR HUSBAND'S SIDE.

There is another woman, a beautiful woman, a woman fond of society, but one who has vowed to love and honor a man who has become an invalid. She thinks her duty is done when she knows that he has good doctors and good nurses; she goes in to show him how she looks before she starts to the dance, or the dinner, or whatever it may be, and she drops a kiss lightly on his forehead and says, "Good-night; you will be in bed before I am back."

LOVE THAT ENDURETH.

He who is stern in judgment will discover mercy because he has loved well, and he who is robbing but that which was dark and gloomy will grow hopeful because a woman bids him to, and believe in a future since she earnestly asks him to, because there their love will be commensured in the finest way. Sentimental? Always.

And always when I say that there comes back to me the one line in a play—"If there were more women whose hearts were full of sentiment, there would be fewer unhappy men."

STORY OF LOU PARRIS.

HELLE OF A MOUNTAIN VILLAGE, SHE STABBED TO DEATH HER BLANDER.

In the town of Tryon City, Folk county, named for Lord Tryon, who camped for some time with his army during the revolutionary war on the site of the town, there lives a family by the name of Parris. One of the members of this typical mountain family was a beautiful daughter about seventeen years old. She was the belle of the town, and her only deficiency was the lack of education. Her youth had been spent in making the farm and helping her mother with her household. Her parents had considered schooling a luxury not to be thought of, and she could barely read and write her name.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS.

Being young and uneducated, without education and training, and appearing to have the making in her of a good and true woman, and desiring to remove her from the walks of life to which she had accustomed herself, and to surround her with new surroundings, the King's Daughters set to work to procure a conditional pardon for Miss Parris. They readily induced Miss Lou to sign an agreement that she would voluntarily surrender herself as soon as released to the King's Daughters, and go with Mrs. Hayes to the House of the Good Shepherd, in Maryland, and there remain until she had been thoroughly reformed and trained, and make an honest living. She was pardoned on this condition on the 8th day of December, 1894, and was carried immediately to the House of the Good Shepherd, where she has been ever since.

WILK MONKIE IN NEWTON.

Miss Lou Parris, who was pardoned on the 8th day of December, 1894, and was carried immediately to the House of the Good Shepherd, where she has been ever since.

THE TREE TEST.

We have found one ex-chairman, Democratic State committee whose head is level. It is Hon. Richard H. Battle. He may be a silver man, but he talks like a Democrat. He said: "The Democratic party is and should continue to be a national and not a sectional one, and can hope to maintain certain important principles for which it stands only through a union of sentiment and action. There must be no risk of sacrifice, such as organization from fear that we cannot have one out of all of these principles; that it is a party duty to abide by the action of the national committee and zealously support its candidates."

THE TRIP TO THE SUPERIOR COURT.

At the next term of the Superior court, with Judge Boyde presiding, Miss Parris was indicted for murder. She was represented by the best lawyers who attended that court, and by their advice she pleaded guilty of murder in the second degree and was sentenced to the penitentiary for fifteen years. The acceptance of this plea was an act of mercy on the part of the prosecuting attorney, because the State would have proved premeditation and preparation to commit murder, and if she had gone to trial she would have been convicted of murder in the first degree and the pardon of the Governor could only have saved her from death by the hangman.

IN HER CONVEY CAR.

She was brought to the penitentiary near this city, and there confined.

STORY OF LOU PARRIS.

HELLE OF A MOUNTAIN VILLAGE, SHE STABBED TO DEATH HER BLANDER.

In the town of Tryon City, Folk county, named for Lord Tryon, who camped for some time with his army during the revolutionary war on the site of the town, there lives a family by the name of Parris. One of the members of this typical mountain family was a beautiful daughter about seventeen years old. She was the belle of the town, and her only deficiency was the lack of education. Her youth had been spent in making the farm and helping her mother with her household. Her parents had considered schooling a luxury not to be thought of, and she could barely read and write her name.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS.

Being young and uneducated, without education and training, and appearing to have the making in her of a good and true woman, and desiring to remove her from the walks of life to which she had accustomed herself, and to surround her with new surroundings, the King's Daughters set to work to procure a conditional pardon for Miss Parris. They readily induced Miss Lou to sign an agreement that she would voluntarily surrender herself as soon as released to the King's Daughters, and go with Mrs. Hayes to the House of the Good Shepherd, in Maryland, and there remain until she had been thoroughly reformed and trained, and make an honest living. She was pardoned on this condition on the 8th day of December, 1894, and was carried immediately to the House of the Good Shepherd, where she has been ever since.

WILK MONKIE IN NEWTON.

Miss Lou Parris, who was pardoned on the 8th day of December, 1894, and was carried immediately to the House of the Good Shepherd, where she has been ever since.

THE TREE TEST.

We have found one ex-chairman, Democratic State committee whose head is level. It is Hon. Richard H. Battle. He may be a silver man, but he talks like a Democrat. He said: "The Democratic party is and should continue to be a national and not a sectional one, and can hope to maintain certain important principles for which it stands only through a union of sentiment and action. There must be no risk of sacrifice, such as organization from fear that we cannot have one out of all of these principles; that it is a party duty to abide by the action of the national committee and zealously support its candidates."

THE TRIP TO THE SUPERIOR COURT.

At the next term of the Superior court, with Judge Boyde presiding, Miss Parris was indicted for murder. She was represented by the best lawyers who attended that court, and by their advice she pleaded guilty of murder in the second degree and was sentenced to the penitentiary for fifteen years. The acceptance of this plea was an act of mercy on the part of the prosecuting attorney, because the State would have proved premeditation and preparation to commit murder, and if she had gone to trial she would have been convicted of murder in the first degree and the pardon of the Governor could only have saved her from death by the hangman.

IN HER CONVEY CAR.

She was brought to the penitentiary near this city, and there confined.

STORY OF LOU PARRIS.

HELLE OF A MOUNTAIN VILLAGE, SHE STABBED TO DEATH HER BLANDER.

In the town of Tryon City, Folk county, named for Lord Tryon, who camped for some time with his army during the revolutionary war on the site of the town, there lives a family by the name of Parris. One of the members of this typical mountain family was a beautiful daughter about seventeen years old. She was the belle of the town, and her only deficiency was the lack of education. Her youth had been spent in making the farm and helping her mother with her household. Her parents had considered schooling a luxury not to be thought of, and she could barely read and write her name.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS.

Being young and uneducated, without education and training, and appearing to have the making in her of a good and true woman, and desiring to remove her from the walks of life to which she had accustomed herself, and to surround her with new surroundings, the King's Daughters set to work to procure a conditional pardon for Miss Parris. They readily induced Miss Lou to sign an agreement that she would voluntarily surrender herself as soon as released to the King's Daughters, and go with Mrs. Hayes to the House of the Good Shepherd, in Maryland, and there remain until she had been thoroughly reformed and trained, and make an honest living. She was pardoned on this condition on the 8th day of December, 1894, and was carried immediately to the House of the Good Shepherd, where she has been ever since.

WILK MONKIE IN NEWTON.

Miss Lou Parris, who was pardoned on the 8th day of December, 1894, and was carried immediately to the House of the Good Shepherd, where she has been ever since.

THE TREE TEST.

We have found one ex-chairman, Democratic State committee whose head is level. It is Hon. Richard H. Battle. He may be a silver man, but he talks like a Democrat. He said: "The Democratic party is and should continue to be a national and not a sectional one, and can hope to maintain certain important principles for which it stands only through a union of sentiment and action. There must be no risk of sacrifice, such as organization from fear that we cannot have one out of all of these principles; that it is a party duty to abide by the action of the national committee and zealously support its candidates."

THE TRIP TO THE SUPERIOR COURT.

At the next term of the Superior court, with Judge Boyde presiding, Miss Parris was indicted for murder. She was represented by the best lawyers who attended that court, and by their advice she pleaded guilty of murder in the second degree and was sentenced to the penitentiary for fifteen years. The acceptance of this plea was an act of mercy on the part of the prosecuting attorney, because the State would have proved premeditation and preparation to commit murder, and if she had gone to trial she would have been convicted of murder in the first degree and the pardon of the Governor could only have saved her from death by the hangman.

IN HER CONVEY CAR.

She was brought to the penitentiary near this city, and there confined.

MONEY IN COTTON.

A Bold Departure From the Popular "Wear and Tear" Idea—The Rules of Interest Paid by Bankers to Landholders.

Call J. T. Sims, of Hester, Ala. Sims on stands: "Did you make a profit of $64.76 on one acre of land last year?" "I did." "Did you lose $4.10 on one acre of land last year?" "I did." "What crop did you plant on those acres?" "I planted cotton on the acre which made $64.76 and corn on the acre which lost $4.10."

ANOTHER CASE CONCERNING ONE OF THE BLACKBOARD TRAVELERS—HOW HE STOOD FOR DAMAGES BY THE REPRESENTATIVE OF THE MOUNTAIN MAN.

There has been another interesting development in the Beas-Williams homicide case. Through his attorneys, Messrs. W. B. McCaw and Finley and Brice, Mr. J. H. Middle, administrator of the estate of Charles T. Williams, the man who was killed at Blackburg, on the night of February 6, last, has brought suit against the SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR—the King of Liver Remedies. Be sure you get it.

WILK MONKIE IN NEWTON.

Miss Lou Parris, who was pardoned on the 8th day of December, 1894, and was carried immediately to the House of the Good Shepherd, where she has been ever since.

THE TREE TEST.

We have found one ex-chairman, Democratic State committee whose head is level. It is Hon. Richard H. Battle. He may be a silver man, but he talks like a Democrat. He said: "The Democratic party is and should continue to be a national and not a sectional one, and can hope to maintain certain important principles for which it stands only through a union of sentiment and action. There must be no risk of sacrifice, such as organization from fear that we cannot have one out of all of these principles; that it is a party duty to abide by the action of the national committee and zealously support its candidates."

THE TRIP TO THE SUPERIOR COURT.

At the next term of the Superior court, with Judge Boyde presiding, Miss Parris was indicted for murder. She was represented by the best lawyers who attended that court, and by their advice she pleaded guilty of murder in the second degree and was sentenced to the penitentiary for fifteen years. The acceptance of this plea was an act of mercy on the part of the prosecuting attorney, because the State would have proved premeditation and preparation to commit murder, and if she had gone to trial she would have been convicted of murder in the first degree and the pardon of the Governor could only have saved her from death by the hangman.

IN HER CONVEY CAR.

She was brought to the penitentiary near this city, and there confined.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR. THE BEST SPRING MEDICINE.

is SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR. Don't forget to take it now, for it is the time you need it most to ward off your Liver. A sluggish Liver brings on Malaria, Fever and Ague, Rheumatism, and many other ailments which result from the constipation and weakness of the Liver. Don't forget the word REGULATOR. The word REGULATOR distinguishes it from all other remedies. And, besides this, SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR is a Regulator of the Liver, keeps it properly at work, that your system may be kept in good condition.

FOR THE BLOOD. SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR. It is the best blood purifier and corrector. Try it and note the difference. Look for the RED Z on every package. You won't find it on any other medicine, and there is no other Liver remedy like SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR—the King of Liver Remedies. Be sure you get it.

Another case concerning one of the Blackboard Travelers—How he stood for damages by the Representative of the Mountain Man. There has been another interesting development in the Beas-Williams homicide case. Through his attorneys, Messrs. W. B. McCaw and Finley and Brice, Mr. J. H. Middle, administrator of the estate of Charles T. Williams, the man who was killed at Blackburg, on the night of February 6, last, has brought suit against the SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR—the King of Liver Remedies. Be sure you get it.

WILK MONKIE IN NEWTON. Miss Lou Parris, who was pardoned on the 8th day of December, 1894, and was carried immediately to the House of the Good Shepherd, where she has been ever since.

THE TREE TEST. We have found one ex-chairman, Democratic State committee whose head is level. It is Hon. Richard H. Battle. He may be a silver man, but he talks like a Democrat. He said: "The Democratic party is and should continue to be a national and not a sectional one, and can hope to maintain certain important principles for which it stands only through a union of sentiment and action. There must be no risk of sacrifice, such as organization from fear that we cannot have one out of all of these principles; that it is a party duty to abide by the action of the national committee and zealously support its candidates."

THE TRIP TO THE SUPERIOR COURT. At the next term of the Superior court, with Judge Boyde presiding, Miss Parris was indicted for murder. She was represented by the best lawyers who attended that court, and by their advice she pleaded guilty of murder in the second degree and was sentenced to the penitentiary for fifteen years. The acceptance of this plea was an act of mercy on the part of the prosecuting attorney, because the State would have proved premeditation and preparation to commit murder, and if she had gone to trial she would have been convicted of murder in the first degree and the pardon of the Governor could only have saved her from death by the hangman.

IN HER CONVEY CAR. She was brought to the penitentiary near this city, and there confined.

WILK MONKIE IN NEWTON. Miss Lou Parris, who was pardoned on the 8th day of December, 1894, and was carried immediately to the House of the Good Shepherd, where she has been ever since.

THE TREE TEST. We have found one ex-chairman, Democratic State committee whose head is level. It is Hon. Richard H. Battle. He may be a silver man, but he talks like a Democrat. He said: "The Democratic party is and should continue to be a national and not a sectional one, and can hope to maintain certain important principles for which it stands only through a union of sentiment and action. There must be no risk of sacrifice, such as organization from fear that we cannot have one out of all of these principles; that it is a party duty to abide by the action of the national committee and zealously support its candidates."

THE TRIP TO THE SUPERIOR COURT. At the next term of the Superior court, with Judge Boyde presiding, Miss Parris was indicted for murder. She was represented by the best lawyers who attended that court, and by their advice she pleaded guilty of murder in the second degree and was sentenced to the penitentiary for fifteen years. The acceptance of this plea was an act of mercy on the part of the prosecuting attorney, because the State would have proved premeditation and preparation to commit murder, and if she had gone to trial she would have been convicted of murder in the first degree and the pardon of the Governor could only have saved her from death by the hangman.