OLD TIMES AND NOW.

ARP TALES ABOUT DAYS WHEN HE WAS YOUNG.

Talks About the China War-How Remote it Was When the Roys Were Taught in the open Field Schools-

Bill Arp in Athents Constitution.

How fast the earth is shricking. How far away was Chins when we old men were boys. It took a three-years cruise around the world to find it, and even then our merchantment only touched at the ports and learned but touched at the ports and learned but little of the vast unknown intonior. Her immense domain-was set down at five and one-half millions of square miles, being one-tenth of the habitable globe and nearly twee the area of the whole United States. Her population was in 1860 500,000,000 and is now probably 600,000,000. Her government for at least 3,000 years has been one of revolutions, internal brolls and changes of dynasty, but it has stood and atili stands and no doubt will continue to stand. Travelers tell us that the star. stands and no doubt will continue to stand. Travelers tell us that the stagnation and ignorance that has long teen charged upon China does not exist; that they are an industrious peace-loving people, and all their traubles come from outsiders. I was ruminating about this China business and the war over there and the cable dis-patches that come in a day, for we had an old-time district school in our town inst night and old Mother Feitou and myself were the two youngest scholars She had on a draw-string frock and She had on a draw-string freek and a pair of pantaletts and was suching a stick of molasses candy, and I had on a shirt and one galton and a pair of breeches that come down mearly to the top of my blue bome made socks. She was likety and I was Bill. We belonged to the infart class and had to stand up and spell "ba" and "be" and "bo." Backy cried because she couldn't well "say" and had to great the company of the stand and had to great the say and stand up and spell "ba" and "be" and "bo." Backy cried beause she couldn't spell "ag" and had to go foot. I consolated her all I could. Kirby Anderson was the amaliest boy in achool and the largest dunce. He was in geography and said Chius was ab big as Bartow county, and that's how I come to ruminate about China. All that I ever learned about China in my geography was that Pekin was its capital and the people were all heather and eat rate, and there was a great wall around the ectire country. Our book makers ought to have known better, for Marco Polo had traveled all over that country and lived there for twenty-four years and was made governor of a large province, and he says he never mingled with a better people. Confacius gave them laws 2,500 years ago that they still reverence and obey. Families are faithful to each other and children are taught to obey their parents as long as they live. Confocius lad anch reverence for his mother that he mourned for her for three years when she died. How many sons do that in this Christian coentry. Of course they have some race traits and constons that seem years had to us but her poker aming the bloods. I never saw General John C. Breckinridge but ones, and that was at a fare bank in Richmond during the war. Colonel Towers took me in there to show me Towers took me in there to show me how the thing was done and to our surprise Breckinridge was doing it.

But the great crime against China was the introduction of opinm from India by the English. This began in 1810, and in 1828 had gotten up to 7,000 chests. In vain and in vain did the experience and his countries. the emperor and his connections protest and plead. They saw that the optum habit was spreading and ruining their people. In 1838 it had increased to 24,000 chests, and its importation was 26,000 cheets, and its importation was stopped by force of arms—and 21,000 cheets were selzed and destroyed. This brought on a war and the Chinese government had to pay $21,000,000 for the opium destroyed, for its value was $1,000 a cheet. Then a treaty was patched up and the opium business increased to 74,000 cheets in 1860. I wonder what it is now. But the English merchants now pay a duty, but wonder what it is now. But the rang-lish merchants now pay a duty, but that amounts to several millions of dollars accountly. What will not Johnny Buil de for money? No wonforeigners and a contempt for our missionaries. The Chinese authorities passed a law against eating opium and gave it a death penaity, but it was sauggled in all the same and they declared that not even Buddha could stop it. Now as to that great Buddha, my people do not express any great adora-tion for him nor faith in him. As Dr. Johnson remarked to Boswett, "it is ponson remarked to Boawell, "It is necessary for every nation to have some religion, whether they understand it or not," and heave the superstition of the Chinese has taken hold of Buddha as the best they can do. But this unknown God has failed them so often in great emergencies they have no unwavering faith in him. And yet there are over 1,000,000 priests in the empire who make a beggarly living out of Buddhalam. Buddha has given them a little good for everything.

Everything that concerns their temporal welfare; nothing for the beart or the immortal soul. They do not believe in either. They say that there is no fature in this life, but if there is plons, Corns, Skin Brustons. Pass to plon the property of the concerns the life will be a second to the life wil then good conduct in this life will Pile cure on earth 2 ensure mafety in that. rain. If the drought continues long, they drag the little rain god out on his wheels and let him stand in the burning sun until it does rain. They want him to see and reel how hot it is. If the rain comes two much and lasts too long and the rice is spronting in the fields they get their squirt guns and dreuch the rain god every day until he stops the pour down. We nught to have had him over here this June and put our Chinamen to work ou him.

But the government—the government of 60,000,000 of people does not cost half as much as ours, with about 30,000,000. The per capita tax is about 75 cents, and all taxes are paid in rice. Ohins has no bonded debt. No revenue from whiskey or wine, for none is dis-

Other has no bonded debt. No revenue from whiskey or wine, for none is distilled or drank. Nothing is in her way of peace and contentment save foreigners and opium. I do not know what is the salary of the emperor or empress, but all aslavies are small. The prince who is to succeed the emperor gets only $16,000 per annum. Then there are thousands and thousands of officials in every provings, from ands of officials in every province. from the governor down, but their pay is small. A soldier in the standing army small. A soldier in the standing army gets but $4 per month. That army is compused of about $1,000,000 of men. The emperor has no arbitrary power. He must conform to the laws and must advise with his cabinet, and behind all is the great hoard of control that represents the people and is made up of two or more learned and good men from every province. This board does not act often or, on triffes, but when not act often or, on trifles, but when any great emergency arises they meet at Pekin and their word controls the emperor and everybody else. That is not a had government, is it? The emperor is entitled to an empress and two other wives, who are called queens. If the emperor leaves no son, then a son of a queen is taken, but nobody knows which son until the emperor dies, for Confucius said that if the young man knew that he was chosen it might make him arrogant.

Another peculiar and democratic provision of the constitution is that the nubility shall not always be nonlithe nobility shall not always be nonlity. Every generation is reduced in rank and power down to the seventh, and then they become as the common people. This keeps the nobility on the down grade and keeps the government from being overrus by a pampered aristocracy. That's good. Yes, it is better than the English law of primogeniture, which gives all rank and the home estate to the eldest son and tells the others to go to grass. I saw a number of the grass fellows in Florida. On the whole, I like the Chinese government and I have respect for the people. Bret liarte wrote:

"That for ways that are dark And tricks that are vaio, The heathen Chine is penuliar."

This is enough of geography. I have written it for Kirby Anderson and Bert Morgan and their sort. Paul Akin called our little grandchild to come out on the verandah and kiss him guodnight. She had put on her night gown and said to ber mother: "Mamma, Paul doesn't know any better, does he?" There are a good many big school boys who know no more about Chins than Kirby. when she died. How many sons do that in this Christian country. Of course they have some rase traits and customs that seem very had to us, but they are not mallolous nor selfah nor are they revengeful unless wrought up to it by had treatment. Our Christian become massacred 200 of them out west a few years ago for no crime but because they were in the way and wanted work and accepted it at less wages. Who ever saw a more harmless, industrious race than those scattered Chinamen who are found in almost every town and village in this country. For thirty years I have observed them in my travels from Virginia to Texas and

To Taboo Bickeys.

Rev. Arthur Browning rises befure the Methodist conference at Toronto to sak that the Methodist taboo be laid upon the works of Charles Dickens. Mr. Browning's grievance appears to be that Dickens said largh things against ministers. If the distinguished accomplist could rise up and answer be novelist could rise up and answer be would undoabtedly plead guilty. Dick-ens, with all his faults, was quite successful in forcing reforms, and he did not accomplish his purposes by soft methods. When he saw an evil conmethods. When he saw as evil con-dition he put on his magnifying glasses and made it look worse. He wrote bitter denunciatious against govern-ment departments, against departments ment departments, against departments of public justice, and against the shams and foibles of society. It was useless to point out an evil and deplore it in high-flown language, The British public was used to that. When he saw a dirty place which needed cleaning, he rubbed the public nose in it, and made everybody su furious at Dickens that they removed the noisance to rob him of literary capital. It amused the novelist to see the Mrs. Jellybys and Pardigules wasting human sames to rob him of literary capital. It amused the novelist to see the Mrs. Jelly bys and Pardiggles wasting human effort by sending 'moral pocket hand-kerohers' to the heathen and Bibles to the starving. It accused him to hear an olesginous Rev. Chadband preach platitudes to a congregation of Christian drones, who needed stirring up with a sharp stick, and so he caricatered them in characteristic fashion. He saw jots of ocedulity and barbariam tered them in characteristic fashion. He saw jots of credulity sed barbarism in America, and saricatured America types so harship that the whole constry was furious for a time. At this late day Mr. Browning need have ne fear for the Epworth League with Dickees left on the abelves. Dickees ridiculed hypocrisv, cant, and neglect of duty. He never wrete a word against good morals or true religion.

The "New Roy,"

The 'new boy' is of later origin than the "new woman," He can make his own bal, sew buttons on his own clothing, cook his own brakfast, and wash the dishes, if nucessary, and he is no longer considered a 'sissy' for so doing. He can carry on successfully a backelor establishment for his father and himself make out the menus, hirr the domestics; and even do his part socially without losing his place among the drst six in subsoil. The 'new boy' is the result of a growing belief among mothers and educators that domestic training is just as good for boys as for girls. They argue that a domestically trained boy makes the best husband, and that the bruther who is obliged to occasionally to make his own bed or boil an egg, will not look down on his sister for doing the same things; also, 'The "new boy" tenflater origin than boll an egg, will not look down on his sister for doing the same things; also, that the girl who can use her brother's set of tools will no longer consider him a superior being because the thole are bis properly rather than hers.—Mrs. V. The following article by william (ill) in Agricultural Epitomist was handed us by a gentleman who lives in town with the request that we publish it. For a number of years this gentleman was a tarmer and a successful one. The article is full of ment for all.

How often this question has been asked and bow wildow answered ! How can it be unswered when there is not one farmer in 1000 who can tell the number of each kind of live stock be had and what they were worth one years ago?

uncertail of white they were worth one year ago?

There is not one in 1,000 who can tell from to black the black block le any for to household and other expenses, blockeeping is a terrible bugbear to the average farmer, but one would think he might take account of stock ones would think he might take account of stock ones to the year with another and if he kept an expense account and also an account of his income he would know where he could retrained if necessary and when he might easily expend or indulge in something besides the bare necessaries of life. Few farmers know how much it would take to support their families in the way they live now if they had to cash for everything they conseque; and that is the reason so many come to grief after selling or resting their farms grief after selling or renting their farms and going to live in town. A farmer can and frequently does, drive as fine a horse as any man in town but he desa't realize how much it costs the other fellow to seep a horse just for pleasure. It is getting quiet common for well-to-do farmers to move into town to educate their children and both they and the children frequently learn more than is good for them. The but they and the children frequently learn more than is good for them. The cost of keeping a pony for the children to ride or drive to school would be small in nomparison and would be keeping the whole family out of the way of temptation.

The moral side of this question is a great dual more important than the financial. The farmer doesn't have to solicit the patronage of anyone. He doesn't have to solicit the patronage of anyone. He doesn't have to merciust; he doesn't have to wrangle and strive with his neighbor like a servinent; he doesn't have to depend on donations reluctantly doled out like many ministers; he short he can be the most independent man un God's green earth if he manages his affairs in a businessitie manner. He has more time and equal opportunities for improving his mind he has less allurements for corrupting his morale, and his occupation is conductive to the highest development of his physical powersile out to us intimate terms with his own family at peace with the world, and he can worship God under his own grape vice and apple tree, some daring to molest or make him straid. Yes! Farming does pay !

In common with her sisters Morth Carolina has realised that position progress is all but impossible where a large body of ignorant invasioning and irraspossible voters are to be reckoned with. Such a condition is the one essential to boar rate and the only possible bulwark of corrupt rule. Never will we forget that a former editor of this paper was compalled to endure severe abuse and be largely misunderscood while he withheld his support from the Prohibition manne on support from the Problitties same as the ground that he preferred automs with white men is nower to automs with colored men in office; for he held truly that division of the white vote or the suborn questions or any other would bring this and nothing but this After his death the soundness of his position of fittees, years before was strikingly proved.
