THE CAUSE OF SURF.

Why Waves Alvays Berome Broak ore in Shallow Water.

Long and oscillatory waves run by ravity, the first agitating the water meanir the same amount at all he, while the chief disturbance due to the latter confines itself to the upper to the latter confines itself to the upper layers of the water.

These sacillatury waves, the most typical example of which is perhaps furnished by the "swell," or regular radius waves which continue to run in deep water after a storm, will break on a shelving abore when their height is about equal to the depth of water. When the depth is sufficient to allow the escillations to proceed unimpeded as progressive motion takes place, each solution to the layer of the place, and un buing kept in its place by the ressure of surrounding columns.

If, however, free oscillation is prevented, as by the interposition of a rock or by the shelving of the abore, the columns in the deep water are not halanced by these in the shellower, and thus they acquire a progressive motion and form "breakers." For this reason waves always break against the shore, whatever is the direction of the wind.

THE FIRST RAILWAYS.

When Sixteen Miles an Hour Made the Passengers Diray.

In 1830, when the railway was open ed between Liverpool and Manchester, the Liverpool terminus was at Wapping. Lime street tunnel was not com pleted until about six years later.

At first the service consisted of three trains each way on week days and two m Snudays, but this was soon found to be insufficient. After Lime street station was opened there were six first slass trains and six second class trains each way on week days and two of each description o . Sundays. The jour ney or thirty-one miles occupied nearty two hours, which led to complaints that the speel was too great to be pleasant and consed dissiness. On the other hand, sauguine expectations were ndulged in that is course of time the average rate of traveling would be at east double the ordinary speed of the swiftest converances drawn by horse It was auticipated that the general adoption of railways would lead to "a wast decrease in the consumption of eats and hay by the satisfaction of steam engines in lieu of horses, and that portion of the soft which has hitherto been allotted to the growth of such produce may be appropriated to the raising of food suitable to the hucion in the time of the corn laws. It sould not have been forwseen that the callway system, so far from supersed ing horses, would lead to an immense increase in the demand for them.—Lav

OF A FEBRUARY OF THE OF

We mean our big sale. It was the biggest in the history of our big stores and we wish to thank all our customers who helped us make it a success. A few odd lots and remnants left over from this sale are going at cut prices.

As early Spring buyers we have many inducements to offer. These will be money-saving inducements to all those who visit our stores within the next few days.

Owing to some improvements to be made in our millinery department we have whacked the price of all millinery articles in two. We must get rid of all millinery on hand at once. Some rare bargains await you in this department.

If you are looking for good goods at right prices don't fall to see us.
