LAZY, PEACEABLE LION.

Young Englishman's Unexpected Meeting With the King of Beasts.

London Field.

That the lion is not always the roaring, tearing beast of legendary description may be seen in the following extract from the diary of a young Englishman who is at present serving his country in northern Nigeria.

"I had just topped a long incline and was walking my pony, when, on coming around a corner of the road, hidden by some trees, I saw, seventy yards in front of me, basking in the sun on an open patch of burned grass, a magnificent full grown lion. The sun was not strong, and he was very, very lazily flicking his tail from side to side. He had a short mane, and his eyes were a lovely amber red in the sunlight.

"My first sensation was one of astonishment, profound amazement and delight at seeing such a fine beast. He was a beauty, and it seemed impossible to realize that he was really wild as he lay on his side, looking at me with his head raised as a dog does when he hears his master's footsteps. He was fat as butter, sleek, coated and glossy.

"My pony, as the breeze was coming from the other direction, did not wind him, and went steadily on without as much as pricking up his ears. My dog was walking on in front, about ten yards, and, luckily, did not notice him. It was not until I was actually passing him, which I did within twenty yards, that I realized that if the lion took it into his head to fancy a bit of white man I should be unable to dispute his right.

"After I had proceeded some 150 yards the lion got up leisurely and followed along the road behind me, but after going about 100 yards he turned into the bush at the side of the road."

Snow Drift Lard.

Not many years ago cotton seed, thought to be a worthless product, were wasted. Now, oil pressed from seed, experimented with and improved upon, and finally made into Snow Drift Lard, has given us the purest and most wholesome fat for shortening ever discovered. Snow Drift then is made from pure water-white, odorless, tasteless vegetable oil, and a small per cent, of choice stearine to make a solid.

It is easy to understand why the vegetable fat is preferable. Food cooked with animal fat absorbs so much grease that it becomes unwholesome and to a great degree indigestible. Animal fat, hog lards, are liable to diseases that may be conveyed to man, saturating the tissues with diseased products. It is true the process of making animal fat for commerce usually deprives the product of its poisonous qualities, but it does not invariably do so, and the thought of using food, even sterilized and naturalized products of disease, is not pleasant. Snow Drift, the vegetable lard, is free from this objection, most easily assimilated, perfectly pure, digestible and for economy is as desirable an addition to the human diet as it is possible to imagine. It is cheaper than lard or butter and a less quantity will accomplish the required result.

Almost every American family fries every day, and because of the kind of fat used this frying has resulted in many households in dyspepsia and its inevitable consequences—bad tempers and general unhappiness.

Butter fats easily decompose at a low temperature and are therefore the poorest frying materials. Animal fats, such as lard, are liable to contamination—both are indigestible. There is, however, a way to fry and bake which does not render the food indigestible, and that is with Wesson Oil and Snow Drift.

Go to the Demonstration and allow an expert to prove to you the superior qualities of these products, for all BAKING, FRYING OR SALADS. There are various other products on the market made from vegetable oil, the "just as good" and "same thing" varieties as compared with SNOW DRIFT, but why take a substitute when you can get the genuine article? Both granulated sugar and brown sugar are made from the same crude material, but they represent quite different degrees of excellence.

Wesson Cooking Oil

Wesson Cooking Oil is the pure refined oil or liquid fat from which Snow Drift lard is made. For all frying it is superior to lard or butter; only half the quantity is required, as compared with animal fat. After using, strain, and it can be used over and over again. Confirmed dyspeptics who cannot touch things cooked in lard may eat with impunity the same food made with Wesson Oil.

"Water is not purer than its source. Hog lard cannot be purer than the hog. Snow Drift and Wesson Oil are absolutely pure vegetable products, cheaper than lard, healthful, and far more wholesome."
