WHAT TAR HEEL EDITORS THINK.

There are some things we do not understand about the recent sample drama at Durham. The mayor appointed as censors three men upon whose judgment and fidelity he could rely. Excepting the mayor because of his responsibility, what necessity was there for the mayor, the members of the board of aldermen, the police and fire commissioners, the city attorney, and the newspaper men, to attend the private performance given in order that the three censors might intelligently pass upon the play's morality. The play was declared by the censors to be too immoral to be permitted a public exhibition, but there sat through the private performance all those city officials, and their newspaper friends, who were not required by the performance of any official duty to submit themselves to the degrading influence.—Charlotte Observer.

The escape of Solomon Shepard, the crazy negro who was sentenced to 30 years in prison for the murder of Engineer Holt, was about the most discreditable to the management of the penitentiary authorities that has yet occurred. Three days after entering upon his term, he got away and at last accounts was at large and of course, was ready to do murder on the slightest provocation, or on no provocation at all.—Charlotte Chronicle.

One poor misguided woman and a fool man can stir up a pitiful mess, as is demonstrated by the recent escapade of one traveling man and his partner in shame. The whole story is sickening in the extreme and never have we been tempted to print the whole mess as it was dished out from day to day. We feel sorry for all connected with the transaction and wish that such stories would cease to come to light.—Concord Tribune.

The Mississippi legislature did an excellent day's work when it voted that Mr. Vardaman should stay at home.—Salisbury Post.

If Morrison is making any objection to the frequent commutations he is given the governor doesn't know it. But the grasping after life does not prove that the negro who has faced the electric chair four times has not suffered a great deal more than he would if it had all been ended the first time.—Raleigh Times.

Speaking about "restraint of trade" the United States Government itself is operating one of the most unfair monopolies in the country. The practice of the government furnishing stamped envelopes printed at cost should be and will be abolished. The government has no more right to sell printing to the trade than it has to sell dry goods.—Newbern Sun.

When the women get to voting we'll bet thirty cents there will be an act passed to prohibit men from standing on the street corner or rubber-necking during rainy weather.—Newbern Sun.

Those numerous newspapers which printed editorial obituaries of Senator Tillman upon the supposition that he was dying will all live up to what they said, we hope. Senator Tillman will have a fine time reading about how soaringly much more the public thought of him than he had ever believed.—Charlotte Observer.

The Law for All.

Nashville Tennessean.
The vigor with which many of the courts throughout the country are going after lawbreakers, regardless of their prominence, is reassuring to the decent citizenship of the nation that insists upon law enforcement for all classes alike.

The promptness of the Federal district court at New York in calling upon Jas. R. Keene to come into court, to produce certain books and documents, and be ready to certify in a case involving shady transactions in Wall Street will be applauded generally. The smooth old gambler was preparing to visit Europe, "on account of his health" when the court began probing a certain "corner" on the stock exchange. The average man would accept service and be in court promptly, but Keene adopts the tactics of the rich and unscrupulous to evade or at least delay justice.

It is therefore, doubly reassuring to see the courts probing financial methods that look dark, and showing no partiality in calling upon men to testify. This sort of procedure is increasing respect for the law in two distinct ways: by activity in its enforcement and in laying hands upon all classes alike.

With Morse in prison for bank-juggling, Walsh jailed for bank-wrecking, and the wealthy Keene rounded up to explain underground methods in the higher realms of finance, it seems that the immunity bath is rapidly becoming an obsolete institution.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J.
