HEART STILL HE TALKS.

Apparently Dead, Man Still Talks and Gives Directions Concerning His Affairs.

A Philadelphia dispatch to the New York Herald, says:

Medical circles and physiological students are interested in the peculiar phenomena accompanying the death in a private hospital here of Theodore P. Bailey, assistant manager of the Philadelphia offices of the General Electric Company. Blood poisoning followed a delayed operation for appendicitis, apparently caused Bailey's death at 11:45 o'clock last Saturday morning.

At that moment all pulsation stopped, his eyes became glazed and closed his limbs rigid, and his body cold.

But for 27 minutes he continued to talk to his wife and daughter till his vocal organs became paralyzed. He continued the conversation for 18 minutes more with his daughter by means of the deaf and dumb alphabet.

The story is told by his wife, daughter and private secretary. Several physicians professed to see nothing improbable in the story, though they admitted it was decidedly unusual for a person to be able to talk after his heart apparently had lost all action.

Bailey, who was 47 years old, was a man of unusual nerve power and mentality. He came of a brain-working family. He had been a stenographer, law student, practicing attorney and builder up of the great electrical business in this country.

Never strong physically, he had carefully preserved his health and possessed up to the time of his last illness a wonderfully fine-strung and highly-organized physical system, which responded quickly and harmoniously to any demand for fatiguing labor that his busy mental life put upon it.

Dr. Newton's Address.

At Main Street Methodist church Wednesday night a good audience gathered to hear Rev. Dr. J. C. C. Newton, of Japan, who delivered one of the most thoroughly enlightening and deeply interesting missionary lectures which has ever been heard here, his theme being the general conditions prevailing in the more important missionary fields of the world, and the outlook for the success of the missionary movement in the Orient, with especial reference to Japan. Dr. Newton is at the head of the theological department of the Kwansai Gakuin, a Methodist college at Kobe, Japan, and has a thorough insight into the general attitude of the Japanese and other oriental peoples toward Christianity. His explanation of the marked change which has recently taken place in the government schools of the Japanese empire, resulting in a most favorable reception of Christian teachings, was especially encouraging.

'Tis the song of the mother that gives the child repose; the song of the SINGER that makes its clothes. L. C. SMALL, Manager. S2.

Major Charles M. Stedman, Democratic candidate for Congress in the fifth district, has challenged Mr. D. H. Blair, the Republican candidate, to a joint canvass of the district. Mr. Blair has not yet made his reply.
