Mrs. Mattie A. Elmore died early Sunday morning at her home, No. 805 East Franklin avenue, after a long but losing fight against the great white plague. For a year or more she suffered greatly but battled valiantly and uncomplainingly. Following funeral services conducted at the home yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock by Rev. G. D. Herman the body was taken to her old home church at Bethesda where the burial took place. Mrs. Elmore was a loyal and faithful member of the Methodist church and had retained her membership at Bethesda for many a daughter of Mr. R. Jennings. Surviving the deceased are three sons, W. Have "Good Luck" Each Baking Day

For "luck" lies mostly in the flour. The wise cook uses William Tell and knows her bread will be perfection—her cake a marvel of delicate lightness—her pastry tender and flaky.

William Tell Flour is made from Ohio Red Winter Wheat-which has no equal. There is only a limited supply-enough to go around among the housewives who have learned the value of perfect flour.

F. D. BARKLEY & CO. Distributors.

When a man like the Hon. Champ Clark, busy as he is early and late, day in and day out, with the public affairs of his constituency in Congress, picks up a book and reads it through at one sitting that book must at least have the merit of being thoroughly entertaining. That is what Mr. Clark did with "Tar Heel Tales" and then, to show his appreciation, he sat down and wrote the author, Mr. H. E. C. Bryant ("Red Buck") formerly city editor of The Charlotte Observer but now holding a similar position on The Daily Missoulian, Missoula, Mont., the following letter:

"Your 'Tar Heel Tales' are deightful. They are as good dialect steries as have been put into print. The other night I had some work to no and thought I would read one of them as an appetizer for the work, but got so interested that I sat up until nearly daylight and read your stories like old man Harper of Kentucky used to run his horses 'from eend to eend.' This is the first book I have read at one sitting in a long time. I hope that it will not be the last one you will write."

"Tar Heel Tales" is a collection of some of the best things Mr. Bryant has written in the course of his career as a journalist, all or most of them having appeared originally in The Charlotte Observer of which paper he was for a number of years city editor. As a writer of negro dialect stories Mr. Bryant excels. Born and reared in this section of the ability to reproduce both in a last week.

very facinating manner, Ben's Last Fox Race" and "Uncle Derrick in Washington," for instance, cannot fail to prove of compelling interest to a Southerner especially. "Red Buck's" keen insight into human nature and his ability to read men and women are remarkable and his ability to relate in a charming and epigramatic style what he sees and hears have furnished him a most excellent equipment to produce stories which appeal strongly to all classes.

From a mechanical standpoint the book is most attractive. It contains 218 pages, is embellished with several half-tone illustrations and is uniquely bound in brown and white checked gingham with pine cones and needles stamped on the front. The publishers are Messrs. Stone & Barringer, of Charlotte, N. C., and the price of the book is $1.25. Those persons who contemplate giving a book for a Christmas present to some friend or relative could not do better than to make "Tar Heel Tales" their selection.
