ADOPT EXTREME MEASURES.

Democrats Determined to Pass Currency Bill Without Further Delay. An Associated Press dispatch from Washington to yesterday's papers says in part:

Extreme measures were decided upon today by the Democrats of the Senate to force the currency reform bill to an early vote. Determined to relieve the uncertainty in financial circles the Democrats agreed to make the bill a party measure at once, to have no Christmas recess unless the measure has been passed before the time set for the holiday and to sit day and night until final action is secured. These decisions were reached at a conference which began in the morning and was resumed tonight. Senate leaders, working in harmony with President Wilson, decided to sit behind closed doors for the balance of the week, not excepting tomorrow, Thanksgiving Day, until an agreement can be reached that will insure united support for the bill. Actual work began on it tonight. The fight will be transferred to the Senate floor Monday and from that time forward daily sessions will be held from 10 a. m. to 11 p. m. with no recess in prospect except for Christmas Day.

"Immediate action on currency legislation is demanded," said Senator Simmons, at the close of the conference, "to relieve the uncertainty that exists throughout the business world. There has been a cessation of activity in many lines of business because Congress has not yet made clear its intention as to currency revision."

"The Senate has no right to hold up the business of the country," said Senator James, another who took part in the conference. "The country demands action at once on currency legislation."

The decision of the committee to make the currency bill a party measure surprised and aroused the Republicans.

"This is merely a political move," said Senator Smoot, one of the minority leaders. "It is designed to make it appear that the Republicans are obstructing currency legislation. This is not the case. I am convinced that proceeding in the normal way we would have reached a vote earlier than we will under this forced process. The Senators who are urging this unwonted industry will have to keep a quorum present. Legislation that is so important as to keep the Senate in session from 13 to 16 hours a day ought to be considered by a full quorum."

N. GLENN WILLIAMS DEAD.

Prominent Citizen of Yadkin County Dead—Was Large Whiskey Maker.

Yadkinville, Nov. 26.—N. Glenn Williams, one of the most prominent and wealthy citizens of Yadkin county died at his home at Williams last night, following an illness of several months of bright's disease and heart trouble, aged about 50 years.

Surviving are a wife and several children.

Since the death of his father, Nick Williams, several years ago, Mr. Williams had been sole owner of the old Nick Williams Distilling Company at Williams and had made a small fortune from the business. The estate is said to be worth about $150,000.

A Greater Position Than That of the Presidency.

T. M. Arrington in Biblical Recorder. There is one incident in the life of the late John H. Mills that is not probably generally known. It happened in Washington City. Mr. Mills was there attending the National Congress of Charities, of which body he was a member. The Congress called upon President Cleveland in a body. A good many made short talks, among them Mr. Mills. The President required his name and wrote it down in a small book he kept in his desk.

The next morning he sent for Senators Ransom and Vance and told them there was a man, then in the city, from North Carolina, by the name of Mills that he wanted as a part of his administration and asked them to see Mr. Mills and ascertain from him what position he would accept and he would be glad to appoint him.

They thanked the President and at once looked up Mr. Mills, who requested them to say to the President that he very much appreciated the compliment but that he was then filling a position greater than that of the Presidency and that there was no political position he would accept. Mr. Mills was at that time the superintendent of the Thomasville Orphanage.

I was in Washington City at the time and my information came direct from Senator Ransom.

Mrs. Emeline Pankhurst, the English suffragette leader, sailed from New York for England after a stay of a few weeks in the United States. She said she was taking back with her $20,000 which she secured during her lecture tour in this country and which she will devote to the suffrage cause in her country. She did not gain much popularity while here and few if any tears were shed when she left.
