

Empire Builder Once Owned St. Paul Globe-Doomed from the Start, He Wiped Out Even Memo-Ty of It.

"The empire builder" once ventured into the newspaper field. For a few years he owned the St. Paul Globe, says the Editor and Publisher.

Whatever may have been his purpose in controlling a daily paper, that purpose failed. Mr. Hill killed the Globe. He did not seek to realize a penny on the sale of even its machinery and fixtures. As we recall the matter, he ordered these to be scrapped. He did not wish apparently to have the paper survive his ownership. He sought to erase it, even the memory of it, and he succeeded. The Globe had attained to influence and prestige in the northwest. When Mr. Hill became its owner its readers and supporters became suscious. They inferred things. They imputed motives. If the Globe expressed an opinion upon a matter of ublic import, that opinion was sup-ed to coincide with some interest of Mr. Hill's. The paper under his ownership was conducted on broader lines than before. It was more prosive. More money was spent in making it a representative newspaper. But this did not avail. The paper was doomed.

It was doomed because it had been acquired by a man of vast power, supposedly to serve merely that man's interests and to help further his plans. The strange spectacle was presented of a newspaper, backed by limitless resources, declining steadily and rapidly in those things which make a newspaper a force in a community-the confidence of its readers and the influence it exerted upon their thought and opinion.

Realizing this and disgusted with his adventure into the field of news-Globe. Thereafter he sought with Thereafter he sought public understanding, so far as he cared to have it, through interviews and public addresses, always widely quoted and commented upon by the press of the whole country.

The case of the St. Paul Globe afforded final proof, if any proof at all were necessary, that a newspaper cannot exist, cannot grow, cannot earn profits, unless it exists for public service. There must never be any doubts, any misgivings, on the part of its readers as to the motives back of such service. And therein lies the security of a democracy, for an uncontrolled press is indeed a democracy's greatest asset.

In perfect health we hardly realize that we have a network of nerves, but when health is ebbing, when strength is declining, the same nervous system gives the alarm in headaches, tiredness, dreamful slep, irritability and unless corrected, leads straight to a breakdown.

To correct nervousness, Scott's Emul-sion is exactly what you should take; its rich nutriment gets into the blood and rich blood feeds the tiny nerve-cells while the whole system responds to its refreshing tonic force. It is free from alcohol. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J.
