Library Notes

Ernest Thompson Seton and his delightful and interesting animal stories need no introduction. In "Wild Animal Ways," a capital title for a capital book-we meet many new four-fooetd friends. Mr. Seton knows animals and tells his stories about individuals in such a clever way that thousands who before reading them had known little of animal nature, have learned something of the ways of the wild creatures and love them as does Mr. Seton himself. Aside from the delightful stories of Wild Animal Ways, Mr. Seton's drawings are always clever and amusing.

Oscar Wilde's beautiful tales have been winning greater and greater appreciation and we hail with joy these most delightful tales from this gifted author. "The Happy Prince and Other Fairy Tales, is a splendid collection of stories that the grownups will enjoy as thoroughly as the children. The tales are told in an entirely original manner and the idea is clever and poetic. They are unusual and full of charm, and it is sife to predict great popularity for this splendid collection of fairy

"The Cock, the Mouse and the Little Red Hen" the tiny tots will welcome this charming little book as a delightful addition to the library. The little red hen is a good houseoper and when the cock and the se are unwilling to help her, she ery cheerfully does the work her-If. She shows what a very reurceful creature she is by the clever way she saves the cock, the mouse and herself from the wicked old fox. All the children will be delighted

"Tad and His Father." This story of the home-life of Abraham Ltncoin gives us a glimpse of the greatness and sweetness of Lincoln's na-ture. The story tells of the period during which Lincoln occupied the lite House, and of the strong bond at existed between the president at his son. Tad, as the boy was alled, a typical boy, full of high its and energy, he kept the houseld busy and the president was d daily to straighten out his olties. We cannot read Lauris-Bullard's appreciation of Linin's life and character without feeling greater respect and admiration always associated with Lincoln. As an appreciation of Lincoln's nature, "Tad and His Father." should take otes to the memory of the Martyr "Girls of the Morning Glory Camp Fire." As an organization the Camp Fire Girls has spread with wonderful rapidity and appeals to both the girls and their parents because its teachings are the best. Although the writer, Isabelle Hornibrook, has based her story on the camp fire work which she understands thoroughly, the book will be enjoyed to the utmost by every one who has the good fortune to read it. The writer gives us interesting glimpses of the New England coast and her knowledge of matters connected with the sea adds greatly to the interest of the story. The book is full of inci-

A Southern Summer Plan,

Charlotte Obesrver. Mr. F. P. Hall, superintendent of schools for Gaston county, has been long recognized as among the foremost educational promoters in North Carolina and he has just mapped out a new line of summer school endeavor taht will add to his reputation. The town of Belmont has been selected as the scene of summer school operations under a nove! plan. The scheme has been devised for the benefit of the boys and girls of that section and it will provide both entertainment and employment for them. As Mr. Hall, himself, expresses it, the Belmont venture "will be a school without a text book." His plan is of a character that will interest all advocates of education in the State. Mr. Hall has made a beginning with an enrollment of 100 boys and girls. He has placed the former under charge of Mr. Ray Armstrong, of Gaston county. For the management of the girls he has selected Miss Laura Watt, of Mecklenburg. There will be no regular program. The pupils meet at the school house in the mornings and the instruction varies from story-telling to blackboard exercises. The aim of the school is to keep the children off the streets in the summer, and give them wholesome and instructive play so that they will develop physically and be better equipped for work when school begins next fall. Consequently the greater portion of the time is spent out of doors for physical development. A tramp through the woods, studying nature, or a lesson some of the dail duties. Belmont is largely a cotton mill town and when school is over a number of boys and girls are not old enough to work and are thrown upon the streets. In order to avoid this, the mill men of the town are supporting the experimental school for the entertainment and instruction of the children during vacation days. The time is pretty close at hand when the North and the balance of the country will be coming to the South for the best ideas on education as well as in all classes of welfare who went over to Gastonia yesterday to make inspection of the modern schools buildings and equipment which the school authorities of that city have placed at the service of the public, came back with emotions that rather conflicted. There was no attempt at concealing pride over the manifest spirit of educational progress in Gastonia as exemplified in the excellent buildings that have been provided and there was small attempt at concealing disappointment that Charlotte is not able to "point with pride," same as Gastonia does. The Gastonia buildings-one, at least-represents the newest in design and equipment and the envious spirit was hard to repress. But if Charlotte cannot just yet boast of the latest in buildings and equipment. this city can lay just claim to one of the finest systems of education and to one of the finest examples in management that will be found anywhere. Charlotte may be a little backward in buildings, but in producing educational results is coming along at a evry satisfactory rate.
