Saturday Evening Post.

You would have to turn back many pages in the history of national finance to find another instance where nations comparable to England and France have hocked their valuables as security for a loan. The last English instance, we believe. was in the seventeenth century. When the British commissioners came over here a year ago to arrange an Anglo-French loan of five hundred million dollars the question of specific security was raised in some impolite quarters. It was then explained, with an air of shocked surprise, that great nations like England and France could not lower their dignity and compromise their credit by putting up collateral.

the hundred-million-dollar loan to the French government in July was secured by a hundred and twenty million dollars' worth of excellent collateral, duly hypothecated with a New York trust company; and the recent two-hundred-and-fiftymillion-dollar loan to the British government is secured in the same way, by three hundred million dolworth of first-rate stuff. In both these transactions the credit of the respective governments counts for nothing. They borrow just as Pete Smith borrows.

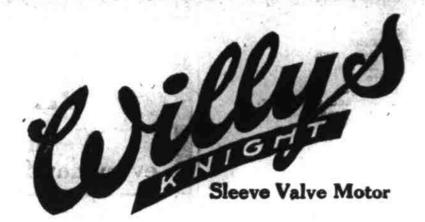

Undoubtedly this means that, in the judgment of the bankers who handled the transactions, no further nasecured loans could be floated in this market-though the total proceeds of the loans are to be spent here for American goods, and sympathy in the best investment markets is strongly on the side of the

The Allies have much good collateral left for future loans, but they are still buying goods here on a scale that will use up collateral rap-

These two specifically secured loans illustrate that, seemingly, unlimited as the resources of the belligerents have been, there is actually a limit.

At Last! The Real Thing in Motors

Ride in a Willys-Knight.

You don't know the real thing until you've had this experience.

Don't judge it by any other car.

There's nothing with which to compare it.

The quiet powerful smoothness of the Willys-Knight motor is a thing to marvel at -it simply revolutionizes any previous notion you may have had about how smooth and soft a motor could be.

You can't possibly realize what it means until you try it.

You simply wouldn't have anything else after you know what it means.

TODAY'S POEM

SEPTEMBER.

September strews the woodland o'es With many a brilliant color. The world is brighter than before.

Why should one's heart be duller? Sorrow and the scarlet fear Sad thoughts and sunny weather! Oh, me! this glory and this grie? Agree not well together.

This is the parting season, this The time when friends are flying And lovers now, with many a kiss. Their long farewells are sighing.

Why is earth so gaily dressed This pomp that autumn beareth. A funeral seems, where every guest A bridal garment weareth.

Each one of us, perchance, may here In some blue morn hereafter Return to view the gaudy year. But not with boyish laughter.

We shall then be wrinkled men. Our hours with silver laden. And thou this glen mayst seek again But nevermore the maiden!

Nature, perhaps, foresees that spring Will touch her teeming bosom. And that a few brief months will bring

The bird, the bee, the blossom: Oh! these forests do not know. Or would less brightly wither. The virgin that adorns them so Will never more come hither. -T. W. Parsons

Joy Riding. Charity and Children.

This writer is not opposed to automobiles. In fact the only reason he isn't sailing over the country in a Ford is that his creditors consume all his surplus cash. But the abuse of the automobile is a peril that threatens to do us a great injury in many ways. A man was telling us the other day about an enthusiastic church worker who bought a machine. Gradually his interest in the Sunday school and church work weakened until finally he quit going altogether, and sent his pastor word to drop his name from the church roll: that he had found a new source of pleasure, and meant to pursue it and let the church go. He began to drink beer and do other things that go along with it and is on the way to the devil at 30 miles an hour. It is true that this man never had enough eligion to hurt him and less character than religion, but while this is an extreme case, it illustrates the effect of Sunday joy riding on anybody who indulges in it. We have seen church members more than one time deliberately load their families on the automobile and start out at 10 o'clock Sunday morning for a spin through the country. No more sermons for them! No more Sunday schools: They have found a new avenue of pleasure which they propose to trav-The faithful will still attend church and observe the Lord's day. A few of the loyal and strong will maintain their integrity, but what about the weak and shallow, and what about their children! There is no law to stop these joy riders. There is nothing to be done except to appeal to the sober-minded not to be swept off their feet. "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy is still in force. But those who are crazy about automobiles have no more reverence for Sunday than for Tuesday. The truth is, we have gone mad over this matter of amusement. and a multitude of our people have surrendered absolutely to its strange and subtle power! Good roads are a great blessing, but it is better to jolt over rocks and plunge into gullies in a one horse wagon than to glide to the devil over a road as smooth as a ribbon in a luxurious automobile.

Women in the Wheat Fields.

Women are playing a more important part in saving Kansas' wheat crop this year than ever before. Motor car tourists and travelers tell of hundreds of women out in the wheat fields, and one man asserted he counted seventy-three women driving binders in a three-day tour of the state. He said he had seen several hundred women shocking wheat and Fine weather the past week has ripened the wheat rapidly and made it necessary to cut it at once. The labor problem is the most serious the State has ever known. Not more than 5,000 harvest hands have come into the State this year, while the original call was for more than 40 .- I

The State has seven and threequarter million acres of wheat and nearly two million acres of oats to cut, and it must be done in the next few days in order to save it. - Kansas City Times.
