A STORM AT SEA.

Gastonia Boy in the Navy Describes a Terrific Storm Which Lasted Two Days and Nights—Several Lives Were Lost.

(The following interesting letter descriptive of life at sea is from the pen of R. L. Moton, of Gastonia, who is serving a term in Uncle Sam's navy. The brief description of the terrible storm which recently ravaged the Gulf of Mexico and Atlantic seaboard gives one the impression that solid land is good enough when the ocean waves go on a rampage.)

Hampton Roads, Va.

U. S. S. New York.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

I will try to give you the best story I can of my experience as a sailor aboard one of Uncle Sam's super-dreadnaughts during a recent storm which swept the Atlantic coast. No, I cannot do that; I could never describe it as it really was for only self experience could tell you the meaning of a storm at sea. I can at least give you a faint idea of what one is expected to face on high seas.

On August 19th we received orders to sail from Newport, R. I., where we were at anchor in the bay. These orders were welcomed by the crew in a very crabbed mood, for the day was exceptionally beautiful, and nearly every fellow had intended to take liberty at 1 p. m. that day.

The order was a great disappointment, so you can realize some of the sour faces on some of the sailors who had planned in advance to spend a pleasant Sunday at the beach in Newport.

At noon here came an order from the engineer's office to light off all boilers and prepare to get underway by 4 p. m.

This being a very unusual order, everybody was lost as to what was coming, as there had been no previous word passed, and never before had they ever lit off all fourteen boilers when going out on an ordinary cruise.

But at 4 p. m. everything was secured for sea, and the engines were turning over. Sunday morning the crew learned that we had been under way all night, at the rate of 18 knots per hour, which is 103 revolutions of the engine per minute. All this was quite unusual and the entire crew was lost as to where the fleet was en route. This doubt brought forth a variety of rumor through the ship's company, such as "we have been called to Mexico." Not until Tuesday morning of the 22nd was there any information given out to the crew. It was then that the fleet was disbanding and all ships were taking a different course. Then a notice was posted on the bulletin board that we had sailed under sealed orders, to carry out "game of war" and at the opening of all sealed orders each ship was to act under its own officer. At this point we were 500 miles east of New York city and 330 miles north of the Bermuda Islands, which is an English coaling station.

Tuesday evening of the 22nd there appeared a peculiar looking cloud. It was neither blue or black but it seemed yellow, as well as I can describe its color. But later, as it grew dusk, everything in sight appeared green, even the lights on the ship appeared green and everybody was in a very excited mood at that time as to what was going to happen. About midnight everybody was awakened by the rolling and pitching of the ship. Finding my efforts all in vain to go to sleep again, I decided to go up on the main to see what was taking place.

THE "PRUDENT" MAN SEES THAT HIS SON HAS A BANK ACCOUNT

This would be a more prosperous community if every father in it would say to his boy: "Son, start a bank account this very week and every dollar you save and put in the bank I'll give you another dollar to put in the bank with it"—and if everybody would have SENSE enough to do it.

The "PRUDENT" young man who banks his money becomes a PROSPEROUS man.

Well, I won't tell you what was taking place on the main deck, for just as I was ascending the main deck I was greeted by a heavy white cap, which had apparently come over the bow, and was so heavy that it was finding its way over the high water line and down the hatchways to the decks below. But at that, I was well satisfied that the main deck was no place for me, so I returned to my berth below and remained silent, although at times my mind was quite lively in looking out for the near future. At daybreak the storm was still in its raging might and the high seas were coming over the bow in such a manner that it seemed as though one sea was trying to pass the other.

That morning I went up in the mast to the searchlight platform, but my time was short there, as the roll of the ship was most too heavy for me. Well, I didn't get sea sick. In fact, I have never been sea sick, and I shake hands with myself every time I see a ship at sea for such a blessing. But the sight of my shipmates who were sea sick was awful, so much so that I shall not disgust you with describing that stage of the game.

The storm had not yet reached its climax, though it remained terrific for two days and nights. On Thursday, of the 23rd, in the afternoon the ship reached the point of rolling 33.3 degrees, which is breaking the ships rolling record since she went in commission. It was at this time that there was much damage done. There were boats washed over the side; life boats were lost and other things too numerous to mention. In case of the U. S. S. Delaware and Nevada lives were lost. Four men were washed overboard from the Delaware. The Nevada lost two men who were washed overboard by the high seas. Although these men were seen at a distance, all efforts were in vain to save them or even to secure their bodies. Once overboard, they were swept in the grasp of the white caps, which were 30 or 40 feet in height. At the same date the distress signal from the U. S. S. Delaware was picked up by wireless. The U. S. S. Texas was the first to her aid, after the relief signal was picked up. It was thought for a few days that the storm had put an end to the proposed war game. On the morning of the 26th the sea was brightly shining, and, oh, what a relief when we heard that we were home-port bound to New York city.

Later we learned that we were only to make a landing party at Long Island, in an effort to capture New York city, which was a success, and a great figure in the war game.

Then we made stratagery for Newport, R. I., and also captured that port, thus showing how easily it could be invaded by a foreign fleet of enemies. Though the ports captured were only protected by torpedo boats and submarine tenders, while the attacking fleet was the battleship squadron.

Meeting at New Hope.

KEN-TONE for NERVOUSNESS.

GENERAL STRIKE FAILS.

This is Tactically Admitted in Report to Labor Leaders—Just 408 Men Responded to Call for General "Walk-Out"—Hebrew Tradesmen Return to Work After Holidays.

New York, Oct. 2.—Tact admission of the failure of the "general" sympathetic strike in New York in behalf of the striking street car men was made in a report late today to a conference of labor leaders, which discussed the general situation. The leaders recommended that every union member of the city be assessed one dollar for the benefit of the subway, elevated and surface car employees who are on strike in Manhattan, the Bronx and parts of West Chester county.

Police headquarters announced that a canvass made by policemen showed that only 408 men had responded to the call for a general strike.

More than 100,000 members of the United Hebrews Trades returned to work after their three-day holiday, as did 3,100 brewery workers.

GAINED 11 POUNDS FROM ONE BOTTLE OF KEN-TONE.

Cherryville, N. C., Sept. 30, 1916.

"I have been bothered with indigestion and nervousness for several years. I have taken one bottle of KEN-TONE and have started on the second bottle, after taking the one bottle I gained 11 pounds. My indigestion is about well, I sleep splendidly and eat anything I want to. Have spent several dollars for medicine, but one bottle of KEN-TONE has done me more good than everything else put together. Ken-Tone has made me feel like a new man."

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Circulars free. All Druggists. See
