WHY IT WAS DEFEATED.

Speaking of the failure of the recent good roads bond issue in Catawba county, The Lincoln County News says:  This regretable act of a progressive and prosperous people is due mainly to starting wrong. In the early meeting of the Hickory Chamber of Commerce and the county commissioners office everybody put forward a plan for applying or apportioning the money. By the time Mr. Stikeleather, the highway commissioner, got to the county and succeeded in getting the sky pilots down to earth, the scrapping over the division of the funds had created breaches in the ranks of good roads advocates so wide that they could not be closed up before the election. The bonds lost votes in many precincts because the opponents of bonds used very effectively the first big mistake of the friends of the bonds in proposing that one hard surface road be built through the county. It was contended that very little would be left for other roads. After the hard surface road proposition was abandoned, many of its advocates became dissatisfied or disinterested. Votes were lost in both camps.

"If the spirit of the special act and the purpose of the county commissioners to first make sure of the bonds and defer all questions about the apportionment and use of the money until after the election had been the campaign cry, there would have been no doubt of success."

The News is right when it declares that the county officials tried to cook their hare before they caught it. There should have been no talk of which roads were to be built or where the money was to be spent, or such questions as this until the money was in hand. As it was, breaches were created, one section of the county going against the bonds because another part of the county was to get all the good roads.

CONCERNING THE PAGES.

Concerning the gubernatorial race and the gossip emanating therefrom, The Concord Tribune thinks The Gazette has the situation summed up fairly well, while The Raleigh Times thinks we have made an unfair charge against Bob Page. We quote The Tribune:

"Little gossip is heard here concerning Bob Page, but his admirers seem to be placing their hopes on the bitter fight to be made by Morrison and Gardner. The Gastonia Gazette says: "One comes from the county of Mecklenburg, which has never had political recognition, exictly because of its own factional lights, and for that reason deserves more some sort The Cleveland county considere come ficehoplets grow on trees, the it were Enough patromage has gone that will others say, ""
