GOSSIP ABOUT GASTON COUNTY

Some Interesting Talk About Gaston and Things-Gastonian — by The Yorkville Enquirer As Seen From a Ford En Route to Charlotte — High Praise For Gaston County Fair and Good Roads.

The following extremely interesting and complimentary bit of talk about Gaston county cotton mills, farms, roads and the fair will be read with interest throughout the county. The article is from a representative of The Yorkville Enquirer who made a trip through Gaston en route to Charlotte. It reads: Construction work on the several mills being erected on the Gaston side of the line between Pleasant Ridge and Gastonia—South Gastonia, they call it now, is progressing very rapidly, all things considered. There is some labor shortage despite the fact that they are paying good negro laborers and trifling negro laborers from $3 to $4 a day. Still there is a sufficiency of labor to keep things a humming and Gastonia people say that it won't be many more weeks before the looms and spindles in these new additions to the mill metropolis of the south will be doing their full duty, provided the mill owners and the mill workers can agree as to how much money each should make. At the same time that the mills along this road are going up, comfortable houses for the use of the workers are going up too, and it is being seen to that construction work on the houses keeps right up with construction work on the mills. Incidentally, Camp Greene or rather a part of it is being transferred from Charlotte to South Gastonia. There is a scarcity of lumber in this country just as there is a scarcity of everything except strikes, and the mill magnates of Gaston county have purchased a number of mess halls, office buildings and other lumber structures at Camp Greene, where soldiers formerly ate slum and what-nots, and shipped the timber to Gastonia, to be used in the building of the new cotton mills. Gastonia always did want Camp Greene, like the progressive city she is, and now she has got it.

Farmers residing on the Yorkville-Gastonia road from Bowling Green on, haven't the slightest idea what their lands lying along that road are worth now since mills are springing up in a night. The talk in Gastonia is that there are other mills yet to be built in South Gastonia all the way down to the South Carolina line perhaps and farmers who own lands along that way just simply don't know where they are. Some of them, it is said, are afraid to name any kind of price for their land if it's anywhere in the vicinity of the Carolina & North-Western Railway. A Gastonia man who bought some lands south of Gastonia a few years ago when conditions were under normal, and it looked like everything was going to goodness knows where, sold out a short time ago for $500 an acre—land away out of Gastonia. He heard rumors that other mills were going up down that way and then he wished he hadn't shot off his mouth and he tried to rue back. There was nothing doing because the mill man to whom he sold handed him a check in part payment just as soon as he said "yes." And it has only been a few years since he bought his $500 lands for about $75 an acre and the man from whom he had bought, having a kind of guilty feeling that he had stung the purchaser, kind of put his hands behind his back when he took the money.

They are building a road in South Gastonia that is far superior to anything that York county has, with the exception of that three miles or so from Rock Hill through the Cherry farm to Catawba river. Quite a bit of the Gaston county road has been completed—at least they now allow automobiles and Fords to pass over it. At one place, however, it is necessary to leave it and take to a man's cotton field. There is no use to say where because anyone who Fords that way will find out. The cotton field feels like the rods on a freight train as compared with a lower berth with nobody in the upper, after one has been riding on the new road they are building. There is some more good road from Gastonia toward Charlotte, for a distance of several miles and then it gets worse than awful for miles and miles. It was once macadam; but one who didn't know anything about macadam would think that possibly a Hun managed to drop bombs along there during the late war and had succeeded in bumping things some. Work is now in progress on a brand new concrete road from Charlotte to Gastonia. The understanding is that it will go all the way, and then with the good road Gastonia is building from her borders down to South Carolina, it will be York county's own fault if the children can't roll on skates all the way from Yorkville to Charlotte.

The Mecklenburg county fair in Charlotte, which in North Carolina is generally considered about as big an event as the state fair is in South Carolina, was about up to standard. But really, it wasn't a bit better than was the Gaston county fair and folks who attended both and who know something about fairs say that the York county fair which is to be held in Rock Hill this week, is going to be as attractive and as large as either. The Mecklenburg county fair covered more ground and was further away from anywhere than was the Gaston county fair; but there wasn't any more to it. The Gaston county exhibits of general progress were just as attractive and just as many and Gaston had just as many hum-bugs and fakirs just as adept in relieving the credulous of their nickles and dimes and dollars, as Charlotte did. And there were as many people in attendance on the Gaston fair and more from York county. One of the most attractive features connected with the Mecklenburg fair was the horse racing. A York county horse, "Superhuman," the property of Henry Neely of Rock Hill and formerly the property of James Bros., of Yorkville, won practically everything that was worth winning in the racing.

AT THE THEATERS

EX-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT DEFENDED HUGHES' STORY.

Late Ex-President Proved Quick and Doughty Champion of "The Unpardonable Sin" When New York Library Bailed.

The late Theodore Roosevelt, ex-President of the United States, who was engaged in adding to his reputation as one of the doughtiest of American fighters in any field where right seemed to need a champion, when his untimely death resulted, had an important part in the controversy which developed in New York City soon after "The Unpardonable Sin," Major Rupert Hughes' well-known book was published. The story has now been put in picture form by Harry Garrison, well known producer, with Blanche Sweet in the leading role, under the direction of Marshall Neilan. The big photoplay has been secured as the attraction at the Ideal theatre for a two days engagement, beginning today.

Major Hughes, who will always be grateful to Colonel Roosevelt for the part he took in defending the book, remarked not long ago, when he saw the picture version in New York, that it would always remain one of his regrets that Colonel Roosevelt had not lived to see the power for good which had been evolved from the story and so strikingly presented in the photoplay.

"The Unpardonable Sin," in story form, first appeared as a serial in the Red Book, and was later published in the book form by Harper & Bros., New York. It had already achieved national popularity, when Major Hughes himself, quite by accident, discovered that New York City public library officials were hampering the circulation of the story on the grounds that its subject matter was not conducive to the best interests of the general public. Investigation proved that while "The Unpardonable Sin" was available in a number of the branches of the New York Public Library, the number of copies on hand was not nearly adequate to supply the demand of those who wished to read it and, moreover, that it was not the desire of the public library officials that the general public be afforded the same opportunity to read "The Unpardonable

"Sin" that was recorded them in the case of other pieces of popular literature. When this condition was brought to light, ex-President Roosevelt wrote one of his characteristic letters, criticizing the public library people for their unauthorized censorship, and advocating the widest possible circulation of the story in the interests of public welfare. "The Unpardonable Sin" had sold in the hundreds of thousands before this little controversy developed, but immediately upon the publication of the Roosevelt letter its sales were almost doubled, until it became the best seller of its day.

"The Unpardonable Sin" has a war background—but it is anything but a war picture. Its greatest interest lies in the recital of the love and adventure of two typical Americans—one a plucky little California girl, and the other a young college man from the Middle West. Blanche Sweet, widely known screen star, makes the most of splendid opportunities offered her in the role of the girl, and Matt Moore plays opposite her in the role of the young collegian.

CIRCUS COMMENDED.

Bangor, Maine, News Says Nice Things About John Robinson's Wonderful Tent'd Attraction.

John Robinson's circus will exhibit in Gastonia Monday, November 3rd, and hundreds of residents from this city and vicinity will attend. They will go early, to be in time for the street parade and will attend both performances. Concerning the show the Bangor, Maine, News has the following nice things to say: "Just a plain old-fashioned circus such as your grandparents enjoyed, rejuvenated and brought down to date, made more interesting by the clean, business-like manner in which it is presented—this is the charm that held the assembled thousands who crowded the main tent of the John Robinson circus. For it is a circus that does not depend on pageants, parades or spectacles, to interest its patrons. In the three rings are presented the cream of circus acts. The well trained animals, the handsome riding horses, and their famous riders, the aerial acrobats, the congress of athletes were all of the highest class, well worth seeing, comparing favorably with any of the big circuses of the country. "The performance of the big show was up to the most glaring claim. It had everything that a circus should have. In fact many of the acts call for a use of superlatives—generous praise that was well deserved. The clown's produce good, clean fun, and make a big hit with the audience."

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—While the people of Newkedin, out of the hands of the boys of Greater Berlin, were planning for food, some of its officials at 10 o'clock were carrying on a wholesale diet-ficking in food-stuffs bought by the municipality but diverted into other channels by the war profiteers, according to the story told in the town today.

Among the items thus shipped to other places were hundreds of carloads of rye flour, 600,000 pounds of dried fruits, fifty carloads of cornmeal, large quantities of canned meats, and much other needed food. Even the wife of an alderman is charged with having had a hand in the grafting too.
