NAVY SALUTES ARMY

Secretary of the Navy Daniels sends the following words of welcome to "Trench and Camp," the soldiers' newspaper:

"I am glad to know that the War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. will produce in every camp in America where the National Guard and the National Army are assembled, a paper that is designed and intended for the men of our Army. For, after all, this war is fundamentally a war of ideals, and the Nation that thinks the clearest and feels the deepest will do more to win the war now and to repair its ravages hereafter.

"I do not understand that the Y. M. C. A. is printing papers for the naval stations also (I hope it will do so) but I would like the men of the Army to know that whether they see news of the naval stations or not that the Navy is doing its part with head and hand in this great war, and that on the sea as well as in the trenches the men of the Navy, both marines and blue jackets, officers and men in the rank, are with that great body of young men who have been called at this time of national crisis to save the world from absolutism and to protect the institutions and the race for which our fathers died.

"JOSEPHUS DANIELS,
 "Secretary of the Navy."
