While Italy was celebrating the fact that there was no longer an Italia Irredenta, and while the world was just beginning to comprehend the scale of the Austrian debacle, came news of the American First Army.

"Italia Irredenta" had been a rallying cry. It had welded the whole Italian people into a unity that no reverse could disropt. One of the major disasters of the war came upon the Italian armies. They staggered under the blow; but they came back with greater strength than ever.

"Sedan" had been a word of reproach to the French. It was at Sedan that Marshal MacMahon surrendered. It was at Sedan that Napoleon III became a prisoner and it was because of Sedan that the power of the Empire of Germany increased till she could plunge the world into carnage. The word Sedan came to be spoken in whispers. When defeat impended, the French visualized another Sedan, When victory seemed possible, they hardly dared to hope that it might assume the proportions of another Sedan.

DISCIPLINE IN THE AMERICAN ARMY

CHAFF-FROM WILD OATS

Because certain educational requirements were outlined when the Students' Army Training Corps was ordganized, some disgruntled men caused to be circulated a report that the American army was not to be a democratic army. They caused to be distributed some printed matter in which the aims and purposes of the S. A. T. C. were attacked.

One particularly vitriolic passage was as follows:

"A sinister system seems to be maturing in America, the full fruitage of which may spell disasters."

The sons of the workers to the hardships of the ranks to stay despring.",

Anyone eighteen years old with a public high school graduation was eligible from the first.

Promotion must be offered to all, but modern warfare demands a highly technical knowledge.

Victory! Yes, victory is ours. Prosperity, freedom, and the happiness of mankind are assured for time ternal. perity, freedom, and the happiness of mankind are assured for time ternal. Even though we have won our fight, still, we are by no means through, for we must continue to fulfill our tremendous task of providing food not only for ourselves and our allies (which number approximately 130 millions), but also we must provide for our conquered enemies and the unfortunates of war torn Russia. Now, with these added obligations, more than ever before, we must save and conserve all possible; not only must we save food, but fabrics, metals, leather, and, in short, everything that we use, in order that the tremendous drain may be lessened on our resources of raw materials. Though our saving and conserving of everything possible play a most vital part in these critical times, yet the reclaiming and bringing back to a state of usefulness, articles that were heretofore classed as junk, waste and refuse, must be given great consideration, as must be given great consideration, as the saving of these adds to our re-sources and helps conserve our stock of raw material.

of raw material.

The salvage division of the U. S. army is doing wonderful work along this line. Three months ago Captain Darnell, head of the salvage division, which is a branch formerly known as the conservation and reclamation department, stood and gazed at a mountain of what appeared to be "junk;" this was the so-called waste material at Camp Greene. at Camp Greene.
