Unusual Opportunities Offered to Women

A unique opportunity is offered women to receive a free 13 week training course in the fundamentals of engineering at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute at Blacksburg, Virginia, the Director of the Fourth United States Civil Service Region announced today. Starting dates of 1944 will be February 21, June 16 and September 18.

The course of study is designed to teach women to make engineering drawings, prepare maps, test and inspect engineering materials, assist in experimental research, make computations, compile reports, and handle technical correspondence.

College graduates who complete this course satisfactorily will be eligible for the Civil Service rating at a salary of $2430 per year including overtime. Those who do not have a degree will be eligible for a rating based on the nature and extent of their previous education and experience.

Room, board, laundry, books and drawing instruments will cost approximately $110.00 and is payable at the beginning of the course. Students will live and take meals in college dormitories. There is no charge for tuition or college fees as the Federal Government will pay for instruction and educational supplies.

The manpower requirements of the armed forces have seriously depleted the engineering personnel of many government agencies, and in order to take care of this deficiency, women are being rapidly moved up into the more advanced phases of engineering work.

Applicants must be at least high school graduates with not less than two years of mathematics or the equivalent in experience.

Further information may be secured from the Dean of Engineering, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Virginia.
