

Club Girl Markets Poultry and Beef

Edith completed such activities as clothing, gardening and food preparation in her 4-H work, but under the stress of war and its demands, she marketed $3,081.05 worth of poultry and beef cattle.

Edith is in college in Raleigh, but she still looks back with pride on her seven years activities with other 4-H members in the Fines Creek club in Haywood county. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Noland.

When Edith couldn't go to war decided to feed a fighter, and she did. She invested $58 of her poultry profits in a choice Hereford yearling calf. The next year she sold her steer for $115.50 and this money, together with $114.50 from her poultry profits enabled her to buy four yearling steers. "In 1943 I bought 10 yearlings and a calf for $625 and sold the yearlings in 1944 for $962.98," Edith said. "All of this work was fun and yet, at the same time, it helped to feed our fighting men."

Home Agent Mary M. Smith of the State college extension service, says that during her 4-H club career, Edith attended club camps for four years, and a 4-H short course in 1942. She served as president of the Fines Creek club and also on the Haywood county 4-H club council. She assisted her club in making enough money to equip a first aid room in the Fines Creek school.

"Edith was Haywood poultry champion for four years, and last year she was awarded a $25 war bond in the state contest.

"More than 90,000 North Carolina girls and boys are enrolled in the 4-H clubs, and their contributions to the progress of agriculture and farm life in the state are tremendous," Miss Smith said.

Besides furnishing an abundance of fresh vegetables for the family, Rachel canned 201 quarts of snap beans, lima beans, beets, corn, garden peas and tomatoes.

Miss Sara Smith, assistant home agent of the State college extension service for Catawba, says that Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sites, the parents of Rachel, encouraged her in every way possible in her gardening work and points out that this is one of the most important points in conducting successful 4-H activities.

Mrs. Sites is a member of the Balls Creek home demonstration club and is active in all phases of its work.

Get Right Kind Of Poultry Feed

Feed manufacturers make poultry feed mixtures to give certain definite results, and these feeds must be used accordingly, says Prof. Roy S. Dearstyne, head of the poultry department of State college.

Recently some growers of broilers have been using starter and growing mash rather than the specific mash for broiler production. "The most economical gains and quick growth cannot be obtained by this practice," Prof. Dearstyne says. "The starting and growing mashes are developed for the specific purpose of carrying the birds from chick size up until they reach sexual maturity. "Broiler mashes are made to give the rapid, intensive growth expected in this class of bird.

While the feed situation is very tight at the present time, still broiler producers should make every effort to get the right kind of feed needed for their birds.

"All small flock owners can have supplemental grazing crops for their pullets at this time of the year. Feed costs must be reduced and one of the best ways of doing this is through green crops. As in providing grazing for dairy cows, beef animals, work stock and hogs, the grazing crop should be sown about the last of August, with a relatively heavy seeding of grains and legumes, and plenty of fertilizer on real, good land."

Price Decline Is Seen For Eggs Next Month

Although farmers are now receiving ceiling prices for eggs, and handlers are not able to purchase enough to meet the demands of the trade, a surplus in eggs, and a resulting decline in prices may be expected within the next four to six weeks, according to poultry and egg marketing specialists with the state department of agriculture.

The government purchased thousands of eggs in North Carolina during January, February, and March of 1943 and 1944. However, the shortage of meat plus increased consumer purchasing power absorbed the large supply this year, and the government bought only around 400 cases, according to the poultry experts in the department.

With an increase in the potential number of layers this season and the withdrawal of meats from the ration list, it is thought that the surplus may be keenly felt this time.

Randal B. Etheridge, chief of the market division, said that the department will assist in every way possible in moving the surplus.

Meantime, the U. S. department of agriculture is reportedly anticipating a national surplus of 20 million cases. In its current release on the poultry and egg situation, the bureau of agricultural economics declares that while civilian demand for eggs is expected to remain "fairly strong," it will be weaker next spring than during the first half of 1945. Military demand for eggs will be reduced, but this will not result in a serious decrease in demand, since demobilized personnel will be added to the civilian population.

However, BAE finds that the per capita disappearance of eggs in the armed forces has run about 33 per cent higher than civilian consumption per person.

4-H Club Gardeners Produce Much Food

Every county in North Carolina has its boys and girls growing 4-H gardens and the total number of gardens runs into many thousands, which are conducted under the supervision of the farm and home agents of the State college extension service and its horticultural specialists.

Rachel Sites, a member of the Balls Creek senior 4-H club in Catawba county, is only 14 years old, but yet she presents a good example of what so many of her 4-H brothers and sisters in gardening are doing.

This year Rachel won the victory garden contest in Catawba, sponsored by the Sears Roebuck foundation, and came second in food preservation. She produced 60 bushels of vegetables, growing

More Processing Plants Are Needed In State

Although North Carolina has a high national rank in the production of many crops, this state is notably lacking in processing facilities for a large number of products grown here.

This is the opinion of D. S. Coltrane, assistant agriculture commissioner, who points out that while North Carolina is second in the production of peanuts, it is twelfth in position in the manufacture of peanut candy, producing only about $250,000 worth of this item in a $7 million industry.

In addition, North Carolina ranks low in the production of salted peanuts, a $12 million business, and also in peanut butter, a $16 million industry. This is the picture, despite the fact that the type of peanut commonly grown in this state is used chiefly for nuts and in combination with the Spanish peanut, for peanut butter.

"The peanut opportunity for manufacturers up to the present time has been neglected to a marked degree," says Coltrane. He adds that products made from peanuts lend themselves to small local plants requiring relatively small capital.

Coltrane explains that the por-
