What do automobile sales records mean to me?

Why should I be interested in the fact that one car outsells another?

Well, let's begin right at the beginning. When you go out to buy a car, you look for the best possible value at the lowest possible price. Right?

Sure, but I don't see where that enters into it.

Here's the point: Automobile sales records are a big factor in determining which make of car will give you the most for your money.

How do you figure?

You see, it all goes back to the one thing that has made our country the best fed, best clothed, best housed and "best car'd" in the world—mass production. As you know, we Americans make things by the millions, not one at a time. That way we can make them a good deal better, and we can sell them at a price that puts them within easy reach of a great many people.

I know that mass production is mighty important.

It's the same way with cars. Mass production methods bring down the cost and bring up the quality. In fact, that's what made the horse and buggy past history.

Check.

Naturally, the car manufacturer who sells the most, builds the most. And, through bigger production, he enjoys greater efficiency and effects bigger economies. These savings can be passed along to you in terms of higher quality and lower cost.

Now you're talking my language.

That's where the automobile sales records come in. You see, more people buy Chevrolets than any other car—and they've been doing it for years. During 1953, for example, 226,213 more people bought Chevrolets than the second place car. And today there are over two million more Chevrolets on the road than any other make. More Chevrolets are bought, so Chevrolet builds more cars, so Chevrolet can build them better and sell them for less. And don't forget that as a part of General Motors, Chevrolet shares the industry's greatest facilities for engineering and research and all the advantages of greater purchasing power.

Sounds reasonable.

It is. Chevrolet, you know, is America's lowest-priced line of cars. And for 1954 it offers more things more people want than ever before. There's new beauty, for example, and new power—to say nothing of money-saving gasoline mileage. In addition, you can have any or all of the automatic power features you want as extra-cost options.

This gets better and better.

Chevrolet's sales leadership means you get more for your money. And it means something else that's mighty important to you.

What's that?

It means that a whole of a lot of people agree with your choice when you choose Chevrolet, and... Hey, where are you going?

To take a good look at that new Chevrolet, of course!
