Famous Men And April

April, like February, is the month in which birthdays and anniversaries of great men and historic events fall in great numbers.

The towering figure among those who have birthday anniversaries in April is that of Thomas Jefferson who was elected President of the United States in 1800 and remained in office for eight years. His ideas, his inventions and his words of philosophy, are all eagerly studied today and there is a good argument in favor of the view that Jefferson was the greatest philosopher of his era, and perhaps one of the greatest of all times.

The birthday anniversary of James Monroe, the man who gave this hemisphere the Monroe Doctrine, also falls in April. Monroe took part in the Revolutionary War, was later elected to the Virginia Legislature, and then to Congress.

Thomas Jefferson, who had become President by 1801, sent him to France and with Robert Livingston negotiated the Louisiana Purchase. Returning to the United States, he was elected Governor of Virginia, resigned that position to become Secretary of State in the cabinet of President Madison, and succeeded Madison as President in 1817.

There are many other famous birthday anniversaries in April, such as that of John J. Audubon, the famous naturalist, who was born at Mandeville, La., in 1780.

A much misunderstood man, Buchanan is finally getting recognition he deserves. Though his position on secession was unpopular, many constitutional lawyers today maintain it was completely sound.

He also believed the states had no right to secede, but also that the Federal Government had no power to send armies into the states to prevent it.

Mrs. Powell Reports First Irish Potatoes

Mrs. Hettie Powell of Mount Olive, who traditionally beats other folks of this section in coming up with the first home-grown potatoes each year, has done it again.

Mrs. Powell said yesterday that her 1954 Irish potato crop has produced and that she has gotten some potatoes from her garden.

1953 State Deaths On Roads Given

During 1953, someone was killed in a North Carolina traffic accident on the average, once every eight hours, a study by the Motor Vehicles department reveals.

The 1953 traffic death toll in our state reached 1,118, or 100 more than the previous year. During the same period, the nation's death toll from auto accidents rose from 38,000 in '52 to 38,300 last year.

METHODIST Report

By Mrs. Shelton Boyd Mrs. Fitzhugh Smith and Mrs. James Francis were in charge of the nursery Sunday. The nursery is open during the morning worship service each Sunday.

The a capella choir, which sang last Sunday, made a big hit with the congregation, causing many of the church members to ask when they will be on the program again.

Those from the church attending the district Women's Society of Christian Service at Eureka last Thursday were Mesdames Shelton Boyd, Fred Sutton, Norbert Wilson, Clayton Summerlin, R. L. Cox, Hattie Powell, J. C. McCullen, C. H. Britt, Ralph English, Willie Hood, Ennis Kornegay, Elias Sutton, R. S. Harrison, and the Rev. Russell Harrison. Mr. Harrison, who was introduced by Mrs. Cox, brought the principal message at the meeting.

At this district meeting, Mrs. Boyd read the local club's report and the organization of a music study class for children, which the club is sponsoring and Mrs. Cecil Winstead is directing, was given special recognition.

Those planning to help with the daily vacation Bible school are asked to meet at the educational building of the church for special training Tuesday night at 7:30. Circle leaders are asked to call their presidents by Wednesday, letting them know where their circles are to meet next week.

Tribune Sport Notes

By CALVIN PORTER

Dave McClenny is the type of coach who keeps one eye on the present and the other looking to the future. Now days when coaches are moving faster than race horses, McClenny's outlook might keep on the track at Mount Olive for years to come.

Mount Olive now has the best record it has had in several years, but the fact of the matter is next year, the year after and the year after that, should be big years on the diamond for the Panthers. The starting line-up is comprised almost entirely of freshmen and sophomores, and what few seniors and juniors there are on the team, McClenny has capable replacements.

If it is true, those freshmen and sophomores are not hitting so well right now, but then give them another year. The results could be amazing.

The 1954 edition of the Mount Olive nine has freshmen Jimmy Overton in right, Harry Cooke, a sophomore, in center, Tinker Bell and Rex Whitfield, both freshmen, at short and third, respectively, and Boyce Honeycutt and Ray Taylor, sophomores, alternating at second. The pitchers, Donald Lindsay, Dave Gillis, Charles Johnson, and Jimmy Norris, have two more years of eligibility left.

McClenny's eye for the present is paying off, and the eye cast toward the future may bring in bigger rewards than fans even anticipate.

Billy Byrd will be back for another year at first, while seniors Carl Ginn and Jimmy Deavers will be turning in their uniforms for good at the termination of this season's schedule. But their understudies this spring should be ready to step into their shoes next year, giving Mount Olive an even better club.

REPRESENTING HOME SECURITY LIFE INSURANCE CO. IN MOUNT OLIVE

ed by the deed goes back to the grantors in the deed, or to their heirs.

A Protective Law

The law which provides for this reversion of title may seem a harsh one, but it was enacted to prevent greater evils. For example, look at the case of a man who had four children and decided to convey to each of them a tract of land. Prior to the time of the delivery of the deeds, a daughter became seriously ill and it was not known whether she would ever recover. So the father decided to retain the deeds until the condition of her health was known, having in mind that he might need to retain the property to care for the sick daughter if her illness continued. The father died without ever having delivered any of the deeds. An unscrupulous son knew where the deeds were kept and destroyed all of them except the one conveying a tract of land to himself. He thereby gained for himself the title to the land described in the deed and an equal share in his father's remaining property, unless the remainder was apportioned by will. Then this son claimed that the father delivered the deed to him and fabricated some excuse for having kept the matter a secret from the other children. If such excuse seemed reasonable, few juries would be likely to set the deed aside unless the other children could prove that the deed was not delivered. But if this unscrupulous son claimed that the deed was delivered at a date prior to two years, he would talk himself out of court and out of the tract of land described in the deed.

Recording Important

Whether a deed is delivered as a gift or for value received, it is important that it be recorded by the Register of Deeds in the county where the land is located. Such a deed is a deed of gift (that is, one for which nothing is paid).

The Register of Deeds in the county where the land lies if the grantee is to protect his title. If the purchaser fails to record his deed, the seller may convey the same land to a second purchaser, and if the second records his deed first, the property becomes his.

On the other hand, if the purchaser fails to record his deed and a creditor of the seller places a judgment on the record against the seller, the judgment attaches to the land of the purchaser, and this land may be sold to satisfy the judgment.

Often a buyer neglects to record his deed because he feels that the seller is so wealthy that no actual risk exists. The depression of the thirties taught us that few men are beyond becoming insolvent since most businesses are operated on a credit basis.

In addition, recent tax cases have shown that some men of apparent wealth have accumulated money through failure to declare and pay their income taxes. In such event the federal government files a tax lien and this lien attaches to the property conveyed by unrecorded deeds.

Checks The Record

In examining title to real property, the attorney checks the record of the seller until the date the deed from him is recorded, regardless of the date that it was written and signed. He determines whether every deed or other instrument affecting the title to the property drawn and recorded within the time required by law. Upon determining that the title is clear, your deed should be recorded so that no act by any other person may thereafter encumber the title to the property purchased. The recording of your deed also protects your title in the event of loss of the original deed.

Errors Cost Panthers in Recent Game

The Mount Olive high school baseball team committed 11 errors Thursday afternoon and handed Warsaw a 10-6 victory in a game played at McGee Field. Only two of Warsaw's runs were earned, the rest being brought about by errors.

Carl Ginn with a double and a single and Jimmy Deavers with two singles led the Panthers' hitting attack. Mount Olive collected six hits off Tew, Warsaw's hurler. Warsaw rapped three Mount Olive pitchers for nine.

Charles Johnson started on the mound for Mount Olive, but gave way to Donald Lindsay in the first frame, after the first four Warsaw batters reached base safely. Dave Gillis came in to pitch the last inning for Mount Olive. Johnson was charged with the loss.

Mount Olive rallied for four runs in the final frame. Tinker Bell and Harry Cooke walked. Deavers singled to load the bases, and Ginn scored them with a double. Ginn later scored on Jimmy Overton's sacrifice fly. Mount Olive had picked up two runs on no hits in the second. Overton, Rex Whitfield and Bell walked and when the Warsaw venterfield erred in handling Cooke's drive, Overton and Whitfield scored.

Three hits and a couple of Mount Olive errors gave Warsaw four runs in the first inning, and in the second the visitors came back to score on one hit and a series of errors. Lindsay managed to keep them from scoring in the third, but in the fourth and fifth frames more errors coupled with a hit or two gave Warsaw four more runs, two in each inning. Three hits and an error gave Warsaw their final run of the afternoon in the sixth frame.

Mount Olive threatened in the first when with two out Deavers and Ginn hit singles, but Tew retired the side when the next batter rolled out to infield. Boyce Honeycutt, getting his first hit of the year, opened the fourth with a double, but the next three batters struck out, and in the fifth, Mount Olive left two men stranded. Ginn was safe on an error, and Billy Byrd singled, but once more Tew settled down to retire the side before Mount Olive could score.

Any successful man has to be a good mixer—he mixes brain power with tireless energy.
